1964 HOWLER

All living things undergo change as they grow and expand. Wake Forest College as a living institution found 1964 to be a year marked by transition. The College made unprecedented strides in its attempt to achieve university status, but the more subtle internal changes, such as increasing graduate study, formed the incentive for this drive. The individual student, too, grows as the events of 1964 shape his future. Just as Wake Forest is no longer the small-town college of the nineteenth century, so also is the senior no longer the timid freshman of 1960.

The 1964 HOWLER unfolds the events of the past year, attempting to present the growth of the individual student in the context of the expanding College community.

A Changing Face Tells Story of Progress

Samuel Wait saw more than pine trees and fertile soil when he looked out across the rolling hills of Wake County on a sunny day in 1834. He saw an institution of higher education founded upon the base of Christianity which would serve the cause of North Carolina. It is doubtful that Wait could see ahead to the Reynolda campus. Still, the dreams and aspirations that were to have a humble beginning in a manual labor institute are the same as those which animate the bearers of the Wait heritage.

A Yankee preacher who came south found Baptists divided still without the basic rudiments of organization. His first task was to gather the threads of the denomination and form the Baptist State Convention. And then he set out to found a school for the training of young men in a Christian context.

The first years were ones of struggle. Feuding Baptist leadership fought the granting of a charter by the State Legislature. Only with the vote of the Episcopal Speaker of the House of Representatives was the tie broken and a dream made a reality. Now began the hard task of making Wake Forest succeed and to this Wait gave his all.

Still, there were others who could come to love a small college in a small town. There was Kitchin who expanded the medical school and moved it to Winston-Salem. And there was Potrat who led through the hectic years of the first war in Europe and the loss of students, and the first battles with the Baptists over the teaching of evolution.

Deacon Hollow meant much to many. To some it was the place where they found themselves "de-educated" as Gerald Johnson put it. To those of a scientific nature, it was the first college in the South to use the laboratory method of instruction and to teach evolution. And yet, to members of the faculty who gave so willingly of their time without proper remuneration, it was supreme service. Today it is again struggling to reach the heights of Wait's vision. Now an idle dreamer can sit on the grass pecking through the blossoms of the magnolia, seeing Wait's dream a reality, now moved on to an area of greater service.

For one hundred and twenty-two years Wake Forest, North Carolina was the home of what finally became known as Wake Forest College. In the byways of a small town began a small college full of personality and memories not so much for the present generation, but for those who have made the glories of the present possible.

Today at the old well where the students gathered after classes and where the academic processions formed, a moss-covered fountain remains to greet the theologians wandering about. To the south is Hunter Dormitory, the only men's residence hall on campus. And far on the other side of the magnolia-dotted acres stands Bostwick Dormitory, which first opened in 1925 for male students but turned into the first women's residence hall when the war forced admission of coeds in 1942. Stately it stands among the shrubs and dogwoods, the home for many in the past.

Throughout the tradition-laden campus, eight years ago departed by the College, brick walks accented by moss and lichens stretch like rich carpets, rich with those who have walked their paths. No doubt, it was on one of these that Dr. William B. Royall made his classic statement that he didn't care if Wake Forest didn't turn out scholars, so long as she turned out men. How true of her purpose and her record.

Moss and magnolia burrs cover the brick walk where students have trudged to and from classes since 1834.

In 1946, the veterans were returning to school and flocking to Wake Forest in record numbers. The old campus was bulging at the seams and an expansion program was in its initial stages. Foundations had been readied for two new buildings and the structural steel was already on the campus.

Fate, however, destined that these foundations would be useless and that the steel would rust until removed to another building 110 miles westward. Rumors had swept the campus that the College had under consideration a giant financial offer. Soon after, came the news that Trustees had voted to accept the offer of the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation of perpetual financial support if Wake Forest would move to Winston-Salem. The attractiveness of the proposal was unique in educational history. The challenge could not be turned down if the College was to have adequate resources for her future growth.

So began a long road stretching to the West where the sun would not set, but instead shine brighter on Samuel Wait's school. In 1950, Harold Tribble came from Massachusetts to head the expanding institution which still had not broken ground for a new campus. The master of the Reynolda campus soon took full control of the situation and the new building effort moved full speed ahead. Construction began in October 1951 and in June 1956 the first students enrolled on a campus planned eventually to serve 3,000.

Winston-Salem accepted the College into her family and Wake Forest reciprocated. A bustling city in the heartland of the nation's fastest-growing region now had a first-rate college to nurture, and support, and take pride in. She had left a small cotton-mill village to come to the home of the Southeast's largest bank, the nation's largest tobacco factory, and the continent's premiere area-air-lines. This indeed was transition.

Still, a bit of the old came to the new. The green grass, the shade trees, the lofty and spreading magnolias, and the cool beauty seemed in some special way to have made the trip also. And placed in a corner off to itself, as before, stood Bostwick Dorm—its white columns missing but its bricks strikingly clean and its coeds again the residents.

Winston-Salem's bustling downtown district is a marked contrast to the quiet streets of old Wake Forest.

There were many buildings, and all were laid out according to plan with stairs and walks threading among the newly-seeded ground. Wake Forest was no stranger to Winston-Salem, for already the medical school had been in town for 17 years. The moving of the College came with no rush, but with thorough and reasoned, certainly saddened, feelings. Just as she had made her place in the small rural community of Wake County, so now the College began to carve an inevitable niche in the much larger metropolitan area to which she had been transplanted, and to which her roots must be firmly affixed. More than ever she thought out the meaning of "Pro Humanitate" in her challenging new surroundings. Greater service to humanity did, indeed, lie ahead.

Also situated among spreading magnolias, the new Bostwick Dormitory is named for its predecessor on the old campus.

The untiring efforts of President Harold Wayland Tribble form a link between the College's past heritage and her future as a university.

A new campus was an accomplishment not to be gloated over but to show more than ever what could be the future—and yet more convincingly, what must be the future. Wake Forest was not through building in 1956. Winston Hall became a reality in 1961 to rehouse the expanding departments of biology and psychology. It was a gift from the people of the city, given as their own testimony that Wake Forest has a great future.

The campus plan, indeed, was far from finished. The grass began to grow and the campus took on that "lived-in" appearance. Now it was looking like a college. The first coats of paint were added to the woodwork and dorm rooms received new coating also. Things began to look a bit worn, as if students had been here. The edges of grassy plots were worn thin although constantly rehabilitated with fertilizer.

And still, there was the continuation of construction. Down across the street next to Johnson Dorm rose another girl's dorm, appropriately christened "Mary Reynolds Babcock Dormitory" in honor of a noted benefactor of the College. After it was finished the ground was filled in, the red Piedmont clay was packed down, and grass was sown. Soon all was back to normal—but normal for a short time only. Across the street ground was broken and construction was begun on a sorely-needed classroom building. For 18 months muddy walks plagued coed shoes, along with jovial hoots of construction workers. Soon, however, the building was greatly appreciated as the library was emptied of classes and students could finally both hear and take notes. Indeed, it was an improvement that had to come and was but the first of many.

Yet there is more—much more—to Wake Forest than mere bricks and mortar and sidewalks. A faculty member is quick to point out that no one has ever sought to deny him the privilege of speaking his piece in the classroom. Stacks of books in the library halls stand still unpacked and uncatalogued, waiting for their places on now ghostly shelves built to accommodate a million volumes. Opportunities abound, as the spirit of progress so necessary to educational development pushes Samuel Wait's dream ever forward.

As the sun sets on today's Wake Forest, the College looks ahead to the expansion and growth that tomorrow will bring.

View of the campus in summer from the new observation structure to meet the expansion of the University.

Map Room Building, completed in 1962. This new building is needed because of the enrollment.

Scale model of the proposed campus shows Wake Forest as it will appear at its point of maximum development.

In 1964, the first seeds were sown that would grow, in time, and boost the College to university-status. On campus, in classrooms, and in meeting halls throughout the state future horizons unfolded: foreseen is a graduate school in every department with doctors still teaching freshmen—for here is the basis of academic excellence; foreseen are more and better-paid faculty members with more opportunity for study and receptive ears to the student whose mecca they have always been; foreseen in future days is "Wake Forest University" emblazoned on the tall sign at the Reynolda Road entrance.

All of this and more, in the context of a Christian heritage rich in her product and dedicated to the intercourse of educator and student in the seemingly simple but arduous task of building men and women. This is Wake Forest's history—one of change, and with it the improvement that prepares her more adequately for the new day that is always dawning.

WF Past Meets Future In Year of Decision

In the last graduation on the old campus, the college witnessed one era's end and the beginning of a new one. Despite the radical change in environment, however, faculty, administration, and students carried with them to Winston-Salem the century-old traditions that lie at the heart of Wake Forest College. Today, the sign at the Reynolda Road entrance serves as a constant reminder to fourth-generation Deacons of their school's proud heritage.

Centuries are composed of years, however, and history is made up of individual events. In 1964, perhaps paradoxically, Wake Forest saw a memorable year slowly advance to meet the challenge of progress within a framework of staunch tradition. In the future chronicles of history, 1964 will inevitably stand out as a peak in Wake's gradual evolution toward university status.

In the midst of this future wave, certain unchanging patterns repeatedly recur to characterize the Wake Forest way of life and leave their impressions on the total experience of every student.

Guest speakers with wide backgrounds in Christian education add "fuel to the fire" in theological discussions throughout the retreat weekend.

Freckles, pigtails, and overalls set a rural mood at the Hillbilly Banquet, part of Saturday night's entertainment.

Informal discussions bring ideas out into the open, as BSC retreaters attempt to answer the question, "What Is Christianity?"

Vesper services around the last campfire culminate the BSU's weekend of worship, study, and fun.

Annual Retreat Upholds Baptist Tradition

An immutable feature of Wake Forest tradition is the annual Baptist Student Union retreat, held during the last weekend of summer vacation. In the peaceful, pastoral atmosphere of Camp Laurel Ridge, incoming students meet seasoned upperclassmen on the common ground of Christian fellowship. Guest speakers accompany students in their search for fundamental truths, enjoying worship and recreation as well in this BSU expression of Christian education.

A freshman mulls over one of many questions encountered in the battery of tests designed to measure high school achievement.

Frosh Face Whirl Of Orientation Feats

Fresh boys undergo the extra ordeal of motor ability tests, which determine placement in physical education classes.

Newcomers arriving in mid-September find mass testing procedures on hand to measure each facet of their academic development. For incoming male students, physical fitness tests evaluate each individual's strength and skill. Before returning home in strangely empty cars, interested parents make a tour of Wake's magnolia-dotted campus. Warding off homesickness taxes the ingenuity of committee leaders, but orientation activities include recreation as well as testing and counseling, to please everyone concerned.

Parents and younger sister admire the modified Georgian campus that will be the second home of the family's collegian for the next four years.

"Moving in" is often a cumbersome process, but it's just a matter of time until things fall into place and dorm becomes home for another academic year.

Upperclassmen Return Eagerly to WF Campus

Upperclassmen straggle in toward the close of orientation week, moving into now-familiar dorms with much less domestic upheaval. With rare leisure hours to spend, Deacon old-timers check up on summertime developments, look up old friends, and manage to meet several new ones. Picnics, teas, and receptions set the social pace, and all agree it's "great to be back"—for the time being.

Handshakes and introductions abound at Orientation's many teas and receptions, where faculty and newcomers become acquainted in a relaxed atmosphere.

The combo party marking the end of orientation gives freshmen "something to sigh about" the following day. The ordeal begins at the Registrar's Office, where long lines produce disgruntled crowds. Next stop is the Library, where faculty advisors suggest courses to schedule and Deacons encounter struggles with sectioning officials in trying to fill white cards. Descending to the Reserve Room, students face a confusing barrage of papers, forms, and receipts during the usual two-hour session, but emerge unscathed to head for more lines at the Bookstore.

"Decisions, decisions," muse students in sectioning areas, faced with the eternal choice between loss of sleep and loss of afternoons.

Fresh wind up Orientation activities with a combo party held on the lawn at Reynolds Barn.

Registration Routine Draws Sighs From All

A student picks up a few pointers on course requirements, along with a plug for Latin, from faculty advisor George B. Earp.

Wearied expressions in the line outside the Registrar's Office reflect the continual "hurry up and wait" aspect of the bi-yearly process.

Registration headaches include treasurer's receipts, address forms, transcripts, and matriculation cards—all bound up in the traditional broken manila envelope.

Students stand in respect for the formal academic robes which denote the scholastic distinction of Wake's faculty.

Photomaniacs held in a packed gymnasium features the many faces of Martha Velez, accompanied by the folk music of the Gashcheters.

The first Convocation marks the official opening of Wake's academic year. Decked out in formal robes, the faculty members are a sober reminder of the scholastic obligations that will soon follow. "All work and no play" is not the accepted Deacon way, however, and peppy cheerleaders herald the athletic season that lies just ahead. To start 1963 off in a folksy, American spirit, "The Gaslighters" and Martha Valez present a hootenanny for an enthusiastic audience in the gym.

1963-64 Gets Under Way With Varied Activities

Brooklyn Hall in Wilmington was filled to capacity with the 4,706 people attending the 1963 Baptist State Convention.

Wake Focuses on Baptist State Convention

President Tribble converses aside with Convention delegates in one of his earnest appeals for passage of the proposal.

It was a balmy November day when 4,706 Baptists gathered in Wilmington. The three-day session was to be stormy for North Carolina's largest religious group. For most messengers at the convention and for everyone back on the campus the main order of business was the Wake Forest Trustee proposal. The precedent-breaking proposal would allow non-North Carolinians and non-Baptists to serve on the Board of Trustees. Judge Johnson J. Hayes and Convention President Nane Starnes urged its passage while Tom Freeman and M. O. Owens vehemently called for its defeat. President Tribble was much in evidence talking with denominational leaders and supporters in this first step toward making Wake Forest a University. The foundation could be laid by those who met in Brogden Hall, or might just as well be destroyed.

Messengers to the Convention stand 1428-strong in favor of the controversial Wake Forest Trustee Proposal, but fail to gain its passage.

Hands outstretched in a gesture of helplessness, President Tribble registers disappointment after the proposal's defeat.

The clock was nearing noon on Wednesday, November 13, when the vote was taken. The College lost the day on the final tally, however, failing to muster the two-thirds necessary—although 1,628 Baptists said “yes” while only 1,106 voted “no.” A 500-vote majority just wasn’t enough. A saddened look on Dr. Tribble’s face told the story in Brogden Hall, while a message of disappointment telegraphed from the campus was read to the Convention by Charles Winberry. President Starnes tried to explain “why defeat” when he talked with Old Gold Staffer Adrian King. It had been a long day in Wilmington.

Those who spoke at the post-vote rally could see that most of the student body was represented

Student Body President Bill Constance addresses Wednesday night's crowd from the balcony, in an effort by student leaders to direct the demonstrations into positive channels.

The news of the proposal's fate brought the expected campus reaction. It seemed as if the entire student body turned out in front of Reynolda Hall that night with signs and banners. Chaplain Hollingsworth had already returned from Wilmington to report that, though the battle was lost, surely the war would be won. "Thou Shalt Not Kill Wake Forest U." best summed up student reaction.

"Thou Shalt Not Kill Wake Forest U." expressed the determined resolution to achieve university status in the coming years.

"College for Sale" is the disgruntled reaction of only a few; most students choose the more difficult solution of peaceful acceptance.

Wednesday night's activities brings tension-charged Deacons running, eager to join in the common effort directed by campus leaders.

A bonfire signified not only the close of the day's activities, but also the manner in which student spirit had been ignited.

Chaplain Hollingsworth adds his voice to the cry against educational stagnation, summed up in the "No Progress—No Students" banner

A raging bonfire gave vent to pent-up emotions and brought everyone running after the Reynolda rally. It seemed to pose the vital question, "Why?" Thursday's chapel brought the answer—"No Progress—No Students." A sign putting the campus on the real estate market was in the minority. Following chapel an hour of silence was observed; not a soul set foot on the plaza and classes were boycotted. The reaction took on an air of determined resolution that, in this hour of Wake's defeat, we would prove this to be one of Her finest hours.

The student body turns out "en masse" to greet President Tribble on his return from Wilmington, turning defeat into a paradoxical victory.

College Union President Dave Forsythe welcomes Dr. Tribble on Reynolds balcony amid Deacon cheers, expressing appreciation for his tireless efforts in Wilmington.

A "Pluck the Gamecocks" banner across Reynolda Hall gives a colorful reminder that Homecoming is just around the corner.

A cheering, appreciative student body 2,000-strong turned out on the sloping green hills of the campus that he had created out of pasture to greet the architect of the proposal and, indeed, of Wake Forest's greatness: President Fribble. Dave Forsythe greeted the good doctor on the balcony of Reynolda. The exuberance of Tuesday swept from the Plaza to the practice field as students boosted the spirits of Deacon gridders preparing for the approaching Homecoming game.

Excited Deacons pour onto the field, hoisting their heroes on their shoulders while the scoreboard in the background shows the Deed of the Day: Wake Forest 20, South Carolina 19.

At the end of the game, pleased Deacons put the final torch to the Gamecocks.

A capacity student attendance heaved for victory and shouted their approval of the gridiron action.

Homecoming Victory Climaxes Busy Week

"Skunk USC" is the theme of prize-winning fraternity decorations, which reflect the high spirits of the day.

Climaxing the tumult of the preceding week was the Saturday afternoon game against South Carolina. Bowman Gray Stadium hosted a myriad of students, alumnae and townspeople—all fanned to new cheering heights by the Deacon cheerleaders. Pep charged spectators, transferring their enthusiasm from the Baptist proposal to the game at hand, saw an inspired Deacon squad hold their own against the surprised Gamecocks and squeeze out a 20-19 win in the final quarter. Victory-hungry crowds poured onto the field, carrying off players and goalposts alike as self-styled arsonists set the ill-fated Gamecock effigy in flames as a triumphant symbol of "the game that was won by spirit."

Halftime ceremonies featured the traditional marching band performance and awards for Homecoming decorations, highlighted by the presentation of the Homecoming Queen. Miss Kathy Cline, sophomore beauty of Hickory, proved to be the campus favorite and crowned her victory with roses and smiles. After the game, festivities moved on to the Coliseum, where Julie London's sultry song-styling captured the spotlight. The smooth sounds of the Pat Dorn Orchestra rounded off a week of excitement for Deacs and their dates.

Miss Kathy Cline displays the queenly smile that won the hearts—and votes—of the student body.

Guest crowds gather in the main lounge of Reynolds Hall to watch the Presidential funeral procession on television sets donated for the emergency.

President John Fitzgerald Kennedy (1917-1963)

The somber faces stayed glued to the screen as the modern American tragedy came to an end.

News of President's Death Stuns Campus

Few students will forget where they were and what they were doing at 1:30 p.m. on Friday, November 22. When the first news bulletins came out over television and radio broadcasts, the reaction was one of stunned disbelief. Slowly tolling bells finally brought the realization that the President of the United States was dead, shot in Dallas by a fanatical assassin, and life at Wake Forest ground to a dismal halt as Deacons gathered to listen to reports in silence. The twentieth century was shocked by this unbelievable act of violence against a man whose every effort had been toward peace and good-will. For minutes and hours that stretched into days, the campus mourned openly—in hundreds of offices, homes, rooms, and gathering places—for the life of John F. Kennedy.

An Old Gold and Black staff member, head bowed in grieved disbelief, listens to radio news bulletins before beginning work on the paper's JFK memorial edition.

With white box-lunches in hand, Dean fans cluster in a somber group outside the Humanities Building, awaiting the Raleigh-bound buses.

A group of students gathered later Friday afternoon to board busses for the State game in Raleigh, but no one's heart was in football. Feeling helpless in the face of such overwhelming tragedy, the crowd standing quietly outside the Humanities Building looked to President Tribble for words of consolation before the busses rolled laboriously away. A chilling rain Saturday morning poured gloom over the streams of students who gathered for a brief memorial service in Wait Chapel, their black umbrellas casting a pall over the rain-soaked Plaza. The flag hanging limply at half-mast for the next 30 days seemed to mirror the mood of sadness that would be no less pungent after the decreed period of official mourning was over.

Bewildered faces reflect the reaction of shock that followed the first tragic report from Dallas.

The mist that seemed to fall from the faceless sky on the rain-soaked Saturday morning seemed to symbolize only too well the loneliness of the day.

President Tribble addresses the group of 500 students, declaring soberly that they will go to the game "with heavy hearts and grieving."

The flag flying at half-mast is a constant reminder of the tragic loss suffered by the nation and the entire world in the President's assassination.

Christmas Spirit Finds Many Expressions

Santa holds the spotlight at the annual children's party, listening patiently to the fondest hopes of each youngster.

Clever coeds transform paper, glue, and a few odds and ends into colorful Christmas scenes, decorating doors for the season's Open House.

The weeks progressed inevitably, bringing the Christmas season's barrage of concerts and parties. Bostwick Dorn's Open House provided males their big chance to tour the cloistered halls at last, as coeds decorated doors and offered refreshments in a Sunday afternoon of yuletide hospitality. Others preferred to cater to the younger set, as the annual Christmas Party in the gym expressed their idea of the holiday spirit. Santa and brand new toys may have delighted underprivileged offspring, but delighted faces were enough reward for Deacon hosts.

Study-weary Deacons take advantage of a mid-winter snow, unleashing pent-up aggressions in an all-out parking lot battle.

Deacs Find Midwinter Doldrums Tolerable

There's always "room for one more" in the snack shop after Chapel.

IFC crowds at the Armory register approval as the Shirelles belt out another old favorite.

The holiday season passed as always, leaving Deacons with a mild case of the January Blues. Dreary weather on Tuesdays and Thursdays drove students into the snack shop after Chapel for a little commiseration and a quick coke. The Shirelles helped some, too, entertaining Greeks and their dates at the IFC's annual Midwinters dance.

Books, notes, maps, charts and brainy suitmates are all recruited into action when January brings exams around again.

Deacs bog down in daydreams, as a surplus of study produces wandering acts.

When it comes to study breaks, some prefer the advantages of fresh air and exercise.

Nipping at Midwinters' heels with alarming persistence, exams excited the usual flurry of last-minute cramming. Studying took many forms as students worked singly and in pairs, with blank despair and quiet confidence. In the bi-yearly QP Crusade, however, material was finally assimilated and blue books were filled at last. A surprise snowfall proved only a temporary novelty, challenging would-be warriors to a battle with the elements and each other; the Piedmont rain soon regained its realm in Wake's concave sidewalks.

Book-laden students seek quiet study spots on campus all the way from dorm basements to second-floor offices in Reynolds Hall.

The Demon Deacon eagles proved the mainstay of winter social life, drawing fans to the Coliseum for the eternally unpredictable ACC basketball games. Students with other interests found no lack of activities, however. A concert by a Bach aria group satisfied the more aesthetic, while a Ferrante and Teicher performance delighted townspeople and students who asked for no more than an evening of relaxing entertainment from these world-renowned duo-pianists. In a more contemplative vein, the week-long visit of Dr. Elton Trublood provided students an opportunity to expand their theological outlooks in the true spirit of Wake Forest Christian tradition.

Deacon tall-men kept Coliseum crowds cheering during basketball season, as they placed in the ACC finals for the fifth year in a row.

A performance by a notable Bach Aria Group, sponsored by the College Artist Series, brought a baroque air to Woot Chapel this winter.

Versatile duo-pianists Ferrante and Teicher captivated a packed Chapel with popular music and comedy routines.

Ice-covered limbs stretching above the Plaza are the bleak but beautiful effects wrought by December's ice-storms.

Dr. and Mrs. Elton Trueblood, during their February visit on campus, found time to speak both formally and privately with students and faculty.

In the final analysis, Wake Forest found no lack of diversion during the winter months. Chapel entertainment ranged from the soprano artistry of Victoria de los Angeles to the transformation of Hal Holbrook into America's fabled Mark Twain. Holbrook entranced a Deacon audience for hours with his flawless recreations of the author's moods and mannerisms. A College Union Symposium in March provided students the opportunity to study the implications of Capitalism from the viewpoints of three distinguished authorities. Sports, too, made headlines, sparking WF news with a departmental shake-up.

Presenting a mixture of traditional and contemporary works, the beautiful soprano, Victoria de los Angeles, highlighted Chapel entertainment for March.

Wet feet are a seasonal ail at Wake Forest, where melting snow and Piedmont monsoons reign much of the winter.

Gene Hooks, recently-named Athletic Director, beams with confidence as he answers the questions of a WSJS sportscaster during a press conference.

Hal Holbrook carefully applies the makeup that transformed him into a white-haired old man for his performance of "Mark Twain Tonight."

Magnolia Court Continues Past Tradition

MAID OF HONOR
PAT MUSE

MAGNOLIA QUEEN
CLAUDIA SAUNDERS

A pretty girl is and always has been a universal delight. Ever since the admission of coeds to Wake Forest in 1943, the College has each spring spotlighted those considered the most beautiful—in thought and action as well as in appearance. Campus lovelies were chosen the first year in a “Howler Court of Beauty” contest which was the forerunner of today’s Magnolia Court. In the course of Wake Forest tradition many queens and attendants have graced the moss-covered walks of the old campus as well as the paths of Reynolda Gardens and the flagstones of Graylyn.

Spring Weather Injects Wake With New Life

The transformation of Plaza trees from bare, ice-covered limbs to a state of full foliage was a painful process that stretched from the first teasing buds in early March to final bloom in April. Once arrived, however, spring was a tonic that brought life back into sluggish veins and cured all ills. A group of renegades dubbed "Mayo's Wolves" drew local acclaim for their good-natured razzing of visiting teams, amusing afternoon baseball crowds at Ernie Shore Field. Meanwhile, campus politicians again entered their heyday, with hours of propaganda-spinning and poster-making directed toward winning the all-powerful vote. And then there were those of a more placid nature, who preferred simply to relax and enjoy the halm of spring before summer's heat was due.

The rich greenery of leaves on Plaza trees enhances pleasant after-dinner strolls to the post office.

Graduation Day Brings Air of Nostalgia

Graduation Day is the culmination of four hard but happy years for the 450 students who receive the sacred shapskin in 1964

Milling about on the Plaza in front of Wait Chapel, diploma-bearing graduates receive congratulations from parents and friends.

After four long years of grumbling about Tuesday and Thursday Chapel attendance, seniors suddenly find themselves walking down the familiar aisle for the very last time. Leaving Wake Forest elicits nostalgia—if not regretful—feelings, but graduates realize that sooner or later the carefree suspension of college years must give way to responsibilities of adulthood. At Commencement exercises, which symbolize this transition, faculty are on hand to view the successful culmination of their four years of effort. Parents, friends, and relatives also add their part to the traditional confusion of Graduation Day, but it is the senior with mortarboard and diploma who holds the spotlight, standing on the threshold of the future with the experience of the past to fortify him.

ACADEMICS

Education is and always has been the primary purpose of the College, whether in the fields of physics or phys-ed, music or math. To the administration falls the task of co-ordinating and integrating the complex academic forces into a smoothly-operating system. Faculty and students sit on their respective ends of the traditional "log" as knowledge is diffused through lectures and lab-work, reading and research. Additional students necessitate additions to both teaching staff and curriculum, and department heads are forced to scramble to keep up with constant changes. Wake Forest also finds 1964 a year for ever increasing faculty distinction, boasting eighty-six professors with their Ph.D. degrees. The college's moderate size, however, gives even the youngest freshman an opportunity to pursue his educational venture under the tutelage of a full professor.

President Represents "College Community"

Wherever he travels throughout North Carolina or the nation, President Harold Wayland Tribble never ceases to represent the students and faculty of "the Wake Forest College community." Speaking before civic organizations, coordinating alumni groups, and soliciting funds for the future development of the College all fall into the President's jurisdiction.

In 1963-64, Dr. Tribble won the overwhelming admiration and respect of the student body with his proposition for Wake's transformation into a university. In mid-November, he directed every possible effort toward persuading the Baptist State Convention to pass the ill-fated trustee proposal. After days of fatiguing travel and strain, the disappointed President returned home, to be met by one of the most spirited groups of students that had ever gathered on the Wake Forest campus. In demonstrations of mass good-will, the student body indicated their great esteem for the man who had put their welfare and success before all else in the face of staunch opposition.

Through exemplary dedication and selflessness, President Tribble has upheld the traditions of Wake Forest while constantly adjusting to the demands of progress.

Administration Coordinates College Affairs

To the administration falls the task of coordinating the varied facets of each student's education. Beginning with the Director of Admissions, the officers comprising the administrative staff each affect the life of the entering Deacon in some way—whether financially, academically, or socially.

The office of the Dean of Women holds the highest authority in coed affairs. Administration in the realm of male students, however, was newly revised this year to provide for more attention to the individual. Dr. Thomas Elmore became Dean of Men, with Mark Reece named to the position of Dean of Students. The task of coordinating the entire range of College affairs with the Office of the President is undertaken by Dr. Edwin G. Wilson, Dean of the College.

In addition, the integrated efforts of such officers as the Director of Residences and the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds are necessary for the smooth operation of Wake's compact community.

Growth, Change Mark School of Arts and Science

The School of Arts and Sciences began its 130th year with a record enrollment of 2,200 students. A new general classroom building met freshmen and returning Deacs upon their arrival in September, providing a dominant note in Georgian architecture on the south side of the campus. For the first time, faculty members moved into their own offices and also left behind crowded, temporary classrooms. Nine departments have now wriggled out of their various makeshift quarters in Reynolda, Wingate, and the Library to take up residence in the new Humanities Building. These include education, English, classical languages, history, German, Romance languages, philosophy, political science, and sociology. Other departments remain in their home locations, with religion in Wingate Hall and chemistry and physics occupying Salem. Biology and psychology are housed in spacious Winston Hall, the Twin City's special gift to Wake Forest College.

During his academic career, a student normally concentrates in only one or two areas. The Interdisciplinary Honors Program, however, now in its third successful year, symbolizes the fundamental unity of all Arts and Sciences. This program, through seminars and original research, offers a number of selected students the rare opportunity to examine a cross-section of subjects from diverse viewpoints. In such non-conventional courses as Darwinism, Romanticism, and The Ideal Society, students discover and trace certain common threads of the civilization and culture which are our educational heritage.

Increased Enrollment Paces Staff Growth

New instructors have increased the staffs of the history and political science departments in both scope and size. Mr. John W. Ramsey and Mr. Kent M. Sole joined the political science department and Mr. James B. Barefield was named to the history staff. In addition, Dr. Robert G. Gregory, history professor, returned in the fall from a year's leave of absence spent in India.

Political science students this year cooperated with other colleges and universities in the state in helping the North Carolina Center for Education in Politics to conduct a survey concerning the formation and change in voter attitudes during the primary elections. In a selected precinct in Winston-Salem, each of 30 students visited five or six families twice with questionnaires. Another visit will be made in the fall of 1964. The results, with similar data collected by college students all over the state, will be collected and correlated in Chapel Hill. The department also assisted with the state internship program, as Dr. C. Richards served on the State Selection Committee. Mr. Jivan Tabibian is working with the Governor's School, which offers special summer instruction to gifted high school students.

The history department, currently one of Wake's largest, boasts a faculty of fifteen members and a student enrollment of 1,506. The department is also one of the first to begin a graduate studies program, which included this year such seminar courses as Modern India and Southeast Asia.

Plans are now being made to establish the program on a full-scale basis, offering the M.A. degree. An honors program offers advanced opportunities for highly qualified history majors on the undergraduate level. Honors extended to faculty as well, with Dr. Lowell R. Fillett and Dr. B. G. Gokhale publishing articles in professional journals this year.

English, Speech Aim for Broader Curricula

The appearance of "New York Times" columnist Scottie Reston was co-sponsored by the English Club and the College Union.

Both the English and speech departments in 1963-'64 directed efforts toward curriculum expansion. The former rounded out its undergraduate program in seventeenth and eighteenth century literature with a new course on the Age of Dryden. The graduate studies program, now in its third year, offers five courses including Studies in American Transcendentalism and Literary Criticism. Acquisition of new knowledge extends to the English faculty, with several members undertaking pre- and post-doctoral work to broaden their own educations. Among these is Dr. John C. Broderick, who was granted a leave of absence to do further research on Henry David Thoreau.

With the discovery of students' increasing interest in verbal and dramatic expression, the speech department expects to double its number of majors next year and plans to put increased emphasis on speech correction. Offering opportunities in the areas of public speaking, debate, theater, radio, and television, the department serves as a springboard for many campus leaders. Examples of leadership were set by Dr. Franklin R. Shirley's publication of a work on Zebulon Vance. In addition, Dr. Julian C. Burroughs served as chairman of the North Carolina Speech Association committee which revised teacher-certification procedures.

Departments Undertake Extensive Research

SOCIOLOGY DEPARTMENT—Seated: I. Banks, C. Patrick (Chairman). Second row: K. Prichard, C. Chee, R. Pace. Back row: J. Earle, L. Robertson.

Research has made headlines in the sociology department this year, with Dr. Clarence H. Patrick working on the status of capital punishment in the contemporary world. Mr. Robert I. Pace continuing his research project with the Hingit Indians, and Dr. I. P. Banks receiving a grant from the Public Health Service to analyze and write up data on Burmese culture. Coming closer to home, Mr. Pace and Dr. Banks are working together on the excavation of a prehistoric site in Forsyth County which dates back several thousand years. Sociology students followed their notable examples and participated in research projects of their own. Investigating student motives for study and exploring the cultural and social backgrounds of the commune system in Communist China are some of the original research projects developed and pursued.

The education department was not far behind, with a progressive research project involving a set of case studies considered as its high point of the year. A "Curriculum Lab" equipped with films, projectors, manuals, and additional texts was established in the department's new quarters to expand the study-sources of the future teacher. Wake's educators owe thanks to Dr. Herman J. Preseren, whose report on how such materials might be used won $3,000 worth of new equipment. Future plans for the department include revision of its curriculum, establishment of a more intensive practice teaching program, and complete revamping of the teacher-certification procedures to comply with out-of-state requirements.

Greek, Hindu, Russian Lend Exotic Touch

ROMANCE LANGUAGE—Seated: M. Robinson, B. Humphry, H. Parcell (Chairman), M. Delgado, A. Tillet, R. Campbell. Standing: J. Runner, H. King, R. Shoemaker, J. Ivey, G. Smith.

Wake Forest Institute of Literature sponsors lecture by Whitney L. Oates relating Sophocles and Greek sculpture.

Wake Forest students now find opportunities to study Greek, Hindu, and Russian as well as the traditional Latin, German, French, and Spanish. Besides grammar and literature, the modern languages stress practical laboratory work in pronunciation and word recognition. These departments share a common language laboratory, this year expanded by five units and transferred to a more convenient location on the first floor of the library.

The Romance languages department is looking to the future, with one-half of its majors preparing for teaching careers and an honors program being offered for the first time. In October the department was host to the annual meeting of the N. C. chapters of the American Association of Teachers of French, Spanish, Portuguese, and German.

An enrollment of 422 students, including thirteen majors, speaks well for the German department. The staff helps the College maintain a regular exchange program with the Free University of Berlin, where two Wake Forest students are presently studying on scholarships. This language also offers a departmental honors program and sponsors public lectures by leading Germanists.

Enjoying a revival of interest, the classical languages department found more students enrolled in Latin courses this year than ever before in the history of the College. In the fall the department entertained the N. C. Classical Association, of which Dr. Earp is president.

Swiss foreign student, Edmee Debetaz, records tapes in authentic French dialect for benefit of language students.

GERMAN DEPARTMENT—Standing: P. Fisher, J. Melvin, M. Bragg. Seated: R. Fraser, J. O'Flaherty (Chairman).

Departments Uphold Tradition Amid Progress

PHILOSOPHY DEPARTMENT—Seated: J. Freeman A. Reid, (Chairman). Standing: M. Hester, R. Helm, J. McCollough.

The philosophy classrooms in the Humanities Building combine elements of new growth with long-standing tradition. When the department moved from Wingate Hall, it brought along a collection of paintings and a library of 4,000 books. The modern rooms of the new building were further furnished with wooden desks that have been in the department for several decades, donated by the children of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hough in honor of their parents and treated with respect by appreciative Wake Forest students. The books, now located in the Spilman Philosophy Seminar, were provided by a perpetual endowment established in 1934 by Dr. Bernard W. Spilman. The philosophy department is proud of its heritage, not only in physical furnishings but also in the dedication of its faculty.

With the transfer of philosophy to the Humanities Building the religion department expanded its facilities in Wingate Hall, setting up much needed seminar and study rooms for religion majors. Academic growth was seen in plans for graduate studies and in continuation of the departmental honors program through its second year. After the retirement of Drs. Easley and Herring last year, Dr. Phyllis Tribble and Dr. Charles Tallert joined the staff. Faculty members earned wide recognition in 1964, with Dr. Via presenting a paper for the National Biblical meetings in New York. Religion professors, in addition to speaking before groups in the Twin City, hosted such guest speakers as Dr. Davies of Oxford University.

Department Chairman, A. C. Reid, takes pride in new philosophy library containing over 4,000 books donated by several generations of Wake Forest alumni.

Majors Enjoy a Wide Range of Music Courses

MUSIC DEPARTMENT — T. McDonald (Chairman), C. Giles, F. Kalter, P. Robinson, L. Harris, C. Huber.

Voice students receive expert advice and training from Mrs. Kalter, a visiting professional artist.

Wake Forest students majoring in applied music, church music, instrumental education, or choral music education may receive a regular B.A. degree upon graduation. For those who wish to develop a musical talent while concentrating on other studies, applied music is offered in the fields of piano, voice, organ, and orchestra and band instruments.

The department provides several opportunities each semester for both solo and ensemble performance, including a recital featuring sonatas by outstanding undergraduate piano students, required recitals by all senior majors, and a baccalaureate recital by selected students. There is also an annual Opera Workshop in the spring.

Although the music department is a small one, it boasts a faculty of which each member is outstanding in his special field. The department was fortunate to have Mrs. Ethel Lashmit Kalter as its artist in residence this year. Mrs. Kalter has studied at Westminster Choir College and privately in New York and has toured with an opera company for which she performed thirty major operatic roles.

Use of the IBM 1620 Computer facilitates the application of modern methods of numerical analysis.

New 1620 Spurs Additional Courses

The purchase by the College of an IBM 1620 computer was the highlight of the year for the mathematics department. Dr. John W. Sawyer, head of the computer center, offered two new courses, "Theory and Application of the Digital Computer" and "Numerical Analysis," aiding math majors' preparation for the growing field of computer mathematics.

The department had representatives in the Interdisciplinary Honors Program, with Dr. Ben M. Seelbinder and Dr. Marcellus F. Waddill participating in the seminars. In addition, Wake's mathematics department initiated its own honors program this year, as well as offering opportunities in graduate studies. One of the fifteen faculty members, Dr. Graham May, is presently combining knowledge and years of teaching experience in the writing of a freshman textbook.

MATH DEPARTMENT—Seated: J. Linder, M. Waddill, P. Hendricks, R. Johnson, Standing: L. Gentry (Chairman), B. Seelbinder, R. Gay, J. G. May, W. G. May, J. Sawyer.

CHEMISTRY DEPARTMENT —Seated: C. Black, P. Gross, Jr., J. Nowell (Chairman). —Standing: H. Miller, J. Blalock, H. Baird, J. Morrison, P. Hamrick.

Chemistry, Physics Increase Graduate Work

Chemistry students learn practical laboratory techniques through individual research.

PHYSICS DEPARTMENT—Seated: F. Noell. Standing: H. Shields (Acting Chairman), P. Mazur, G. Williams, R. Brehme.

To meet the expanding needs of the chemistry department, two professors joined the faculty fresh from graduate work at universities in the Great Lakes region. Dr. H. Wallace Baird, with a degree from the University of Wisconsin, specializes in the area of X-ray diffraction. Coming from Northwestern University is Dr. James Morrison, who holds organic chemistry as his field of concentration.

With a total of 24 majors working toward bachelor's degrees in chemistry, the department attempts the double function of training students for the immediate practice of chemistry and of preparing those who aspire toward graduate work. The department's own graduate courses include such advanced work as Thermodynamics and Chemical Bonding.

The physics department also welcomed a newcomer this year, as Dr. J. Noell from Berea College joined the staff as a visiting professor. He replaced Dr. Thomas Turner, who is presently on a leave of absence doing research work in Mol, Belgium, on a National Science Grant. Physics, on the honors and graduate level, offered opportunities for work on individual research projects and in modern physics. Courses such as Electromagnetism and Solid State Physics were supplemented by lab experiments which illustrated the scientific principles in question.

The X-ray diffraction machine, used to determine crystal structure, is a useful asset to the student of solid state physics.

Sciences Thrive in Spacious Winston Hall

BIOLOGY DEPARTMENT—Seated: W. Flory, C. Allen, J. Dunck, J. McDonald, J. Davis. Standing: G. Clark, R. Amen, T. Olive, R. Sullivan, R. Wyatt.

Since their transplant in 1961, both natural science departments have thrived in the modern surroundings of Winston Hall. With biology already boasting a graduate studies program, the psychology department plans to offer its own research-oriented master's degree beginning next fall. In addition, the two continued their departmental honors programs for highly qualified students.

Faculty expansion is another feature of the biology department. When the College first moved to Winston-Salem, there were only four professors; today biology maintains a faculty of thirteen, all of whom hold doctorate degrees. Several are supplementing their educations with advanced work: on grants from the National Science Foundation, Dr. McDonald is doing research on myxobacterium and Dr. Higgins is taking a leave of absence to study the invertebrate fauna of the Indian Ocean. Dr. Olive, in addition, is preparing an original study on aphids and will participate in a symposium at the University of California.

The psychology faculty has also produced no less than ten research publications this year. Growth is also noted in the addition of two new staff members, one to the Center for Psychological Services which is administered by the department. In April the psychology department arranged for a campus lecture by Dr. Harry Harlow, past president of the American Psychological Association.

PSYCHOLOGY DEPARTMENT—Sated: R. Dufort, J. Williams (Chairman), D. Catron.
Standing: D. Hills, J. Hicks, R. Beck.

Physical Ed. Expands Electives, Intramurals

Swamped with student requests to take such courses as golf, tennis, and bowling, the physical education department is considering expansion of its elective program. Plans also include improvement of the intramural program to include a greater number and variety of activities, in light of increased turnouts. To broaden the program even further, emphasis will be put on mixed participation by men and women.

The department this year worked on revision of curriculum requirements for majors, to go into effect next year. Under this change, Wake's standards will conform to new guidelines established for teacher-training in physical education on a statewide basis.

In the two basic physical education courses required of all undergraduates, the department stresses not only those sports which will contribute to the physical fitness of the individual, but also those with long-range value. Officials feel that it is important for a student to master physical skills which can aid him in related sports and for him to learn to enjoy activities in which he can participate throughout his entire lifetime.

ROTC Expands to Include Flight Training

Organized along the lines of a regular Army unit, the Wake Forest ROTC cadet corps provides maximum opportunities for exercising leadership. Last fall the organization was revised slightly, with the old "battle group" replaced by a "brigade." Approximately 450 men are enrolled in the corps this year, including drill and rifle teams and a band. In June of 1963, Colonel S. Julian Boyles succeeded Colonel John F. Reed as professor of military science and commander of the Wake Forest ROTC.

Because the program strives to train these men mentally and physically for careers as armed services officers, a new flight training program has been added to the curriculum. After thirty-five hours of ground instruction and thirty-seven hours of in-flight training, participating cadets receive their FAA pilot's licenses. This program is indicative of the steady growth of the department since its establishment here in 1951.

"Minding the Store" Proves No Small Matter

BUSINESS FACULTY—Seated: J. Owen, G. Rogers (Dean), F. Newsom. Standing: K. Scott, D. Hylton, L. Cook, G. Hobart, O. Lewis.

Along with the nickel soda, the "General Merchandise and Dry Goods" store is rapidly disappearing from the commercial front. With the current growth of industrialization and increased complexity of modern finances, would-be business leaders find that "minding the store" is no longer a simple matter.

Besides general preparation, the Business School offers specialization in such fields as accounting, economics, finance, industrial relations, marketing, and public administration. Classroom instruction and individual guidance in research problems form the nucleus of the curriculum, with visits to Winston-Salem commercial firms and attendance of local business symposiums encouraged.

This year the School also continued with its ten-week course of instruction for local businessmen who wish to extend their education. This course is conducted on a seminar basis with top men in such fields as economics, marketing, management, mathematics, and English lecturing to the group.

The death of Dr. Charles M. Ramsey, professor of economics, on October 29, 1963, was a sad occasion for the School. Dr. Ramsey had taught at Wake Forest since 1953 and was respected and loved by all those with whom he was associated. His loss was sincerely mourned not only by the School of Business Administration, but by the entire College.

1964 Sees Growth in Graduate Division

Dean of Graduate Studies, Henry S. Stroupe.

On January 13, 1961, the trustees of Wake Forest College established the Division of Graduate Studies. In September of the same year, graduate students began academic and research work leading to the degree of Master of Arts in the departments of biology, chemistry, English, history, mathematics, and physics. Since that time, the total enrollment of the Division has increased by nearly fifty percent each year.

A full program of study leading to this degree is presently offered in these six departments, with a total of 106 students enrolled. Although it does not offer a master's degree, the education department does offer professional courses required for the issuance of the N. C. Graduate Certificate and for the renewal of other certificates. Newest addition to the roster is the department of psychology, which this past year completed plans for a program of graduate studies to begin in the fall.

Aided by the total of fifty-eight assistantships, fellowships, and scholarships awarded during the 1963-64 academic year, graduate students enjoyed such advanced courses as Nuclear Physics, Abstract Algebra, and The Civil War and Reconstruction as they worked toward their master's degree. The Division found seminars, research projects, and independent study very much in keeping with the goals of higher education.

Before successful completion of the graduate program, each student must undergo a rigorous oral examination in his major field.

Terms such as "fortis," "grantee," and "habeas corpus" might well bewilder the undergraduate, but they constitute the daily bread of a law student. Since its establishment here in 1894, Wake's School of Law has drawn graduates from colleges and universities all over the East, from Harvard to Mars Hill. The Law School proposes to train a student in legal principles and doctrines, to stimulate his reasoning powers, and to develop in him a profound sense of legal ethics, professional responsibility, and the duty of the lawyer to society.

Housed in its own separate building, the School now maintains a faculty of eight full-time professors and a visiting professor each year. An object of special pride is the modern and functional law library, containing approximately 31,100 volumes and providing adequate space for quiet individual study.

Graduates encounter no problems in finding professional positions, as Wake's School of Law receives full approval of all national and state accrediting agencies, including the Association of American Law Schools, the American Bar Association, and the University of the State of New York.

ORGANIZATIONS

With "Pub Row" retaining its traditional position as center for extra-curricular activities, 1964 found Wake Forest providing additional opportunities for students seeking outlets for creative ability in addition to their academic studies. Two recently formed political clubs reflect the rising importance of world government, just as new language clubs indicate today's emphasis on international affairs. In a different area of extra-curriculars, the Greek honoraries recognize achievement and offer service possibilities as they distinguish outstanding students in their respective major departments. The College Union, hitting a cross-section of student interests, rounds off the yearly calendar with scores of events including lectures, movies, entertainment groups, dances, and the annual C. U. Symposium. Wake's wide variety of extra-curriculars provides each student the opportunity to develop his own special talents.

Who's Who Acknowledges Campus Leadership

Covering educational institutions from California to Connecticut, the publishers of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities seek to recognize student leaders in all areas, on a nationwide basis. Each year this hard-bound directory is sent to graduate school deans and business executives in all parts of the country, to acquaint them with the "cream of the college crop."

At Wake Forest, a joint student-faculty committee reviewed the records of many student leaders, out of which twenty-five were selected for outstanding service in Wake Forest College activities. From athletic fields, student government offices, the theater stage, and fraternity houses they came, each having achieved a top position in his particular field through that dedication and selflessness so necessary to success.

For every "top man" on the totem pole, however, there must be a totem pole; and those working in secondary positions often contributed much to the total operation of the group without the benefit of popular recognition. These twenty-five outstanding Deacons in fact, will be the first to admit that a leader's success hinges largely upon the aid of those working under him.

Omicron Delta Kappa

In May, Omicron Delta Kappa proudly celebrated its 25th year with an anniversary banquet. Members of this honorary organization are selected on the basis of their past records of leadership and service to the campus. This year, activities included maintenance of a scholarship fund for graduate study, a fall banquet during which Dr. Mark Depp spoke on "Responsibility of Leadership," and the co-sponsorship of a Leadership Conference with Tassels.

Tassels

Girls especially distinguished by their records of leadership, scholarship, and service are honored by membership in Tassels. New members are "tapped" and initiated during an impressive Chapel ceremony. In early May, the group launched its co-sponsorship of the Leadership Conference for high school students, in which area youngsters visited the campus for workshops and discussions on various college activities.

Alpha Epsilon Delta

The Gamma chapter of Alpha Epsilon Delta pre-medical honor society strives to further interest and scholarship in pre-medical education. Members assisted the American Red Cross Bloodmobile with its annual visit to the campus and also co-operated with the North Carolina Eye Bank, Inc. The annual tour of Bowman Gray School of Medicine and the trip to the National Convention at Chapel Hill highlighted the chapter's activities this year.

Beta Beta Beta

The Gamma Rho chapter of Beta Beta Beta, national honorary biology society, seeks to recognize outstanding students in Wake Forest's department of biology. In addition to selection and initiation of new members, the group this year entertained several guest speakers. Their talks, rather than being strictly limited to biological science, attempted to investigate biology in the context of other such varied areas as social history and culture.

Delta Phi Alpha

Delta Phi Alpha, honorary German fraternity, was founded in 1929 with the purpose of promoting higher scholarship in the area of German life and culture. Featured in the fall was a series of panel discussions and Dr. Hans J. Keutel's speech in December on "The German University," after which the American university is modeled. The Delta Chi chapter this spring discussed Goethe's novels and held a dinner at the Bavarian Restaurant in Raleigh.

Eta Sigma Phi

Serving to encourage classical scholarship, Eta Sigma Phi is a national fraternity which honors students who have done excellent work in Latin or Greek. This year members played host to the North Carolina Classical Association in November and to Professor Whitney J. Oates of Princeton University in February. As an annual event the Beta Iota chapter awards medals to four outstanding Winston-Salem high school students.

Gamma Sigma Epsilon

Gamma Sigma Epsilon, the only co-educational national honorary chemistry fraternity, provides activities of interest to outstanding students of chemistry. As a service, the group each year sells handbooks of chemistry and physics and presents a gift copy to the most outstanding freshman chemistry student. In addition to hosting guest speakers, the fraternity entered an exhibit at the Science Fair held on the Wake Forest campus in March.

Kappa Mu Epsilon

Members of Kappa Mu Epsilon, honorary math society, recognize the important role math has played in the development of civilization and of logical thought-processes. Honoring students with outstanding achievement in math studies, the society this year met twice a month to hear a speaker on some phase of modern mathematics. Guests included local high school and college teachers, an insurance representative, and an IBM employee.

Phi Alpha Theta

Wake's honorary history fraternity, Phi Alpha Theta, takes up where classes leave off by providing for extension of individual interests. Through several distinguished guest speakers, members learned of recent developments in trouble-spots from Korea to Calcutta. Domestic history was also investigated, as Nick Bragg, educational director for Old Salem, addressed the group on "Historical Restoration in North Carolina."

Tau Kappa Alpha

Newly merged with Delta Sigma Rho, another honorary forensic fraternity, Tau Kappa Alpha continued this year to recognize Wake's outstanding debaters and public speakers. Highlighting the year's activities was sponsorship of the Novice Debate Tournament, held at Wake Forest in the fall. First year debaters from Massachusetts to Miami took part in the competition, with the University of Richmond team emerging as the overall winner.

Phi Epsilon Kappa

Selected by department officials, outstanding physical education majors find common goals in Phi Epsilon Kappa. The purpose of this honorary fraternity is to aid the student in developing professional standards while preparing for a coaching career. Speakers this year included Dr. W. H. Davis, who discussed physical education in small schools, and Coach "Red" Wilson from Reynolds High School, who talked about teaching duties.

Phi Sigma Iota

Members of Phi Sigma Iota, honorary romance language fraternity, pursue the study of French or Spanish language and customs beyond the level of classroom study. Monthly meetings this year usually featured a guest speaker or the reading of a literary selection. The general area of study was "Drama." Elected on an honorary basis, new members are initiated twice a year and must present a paper during the term on some phase of French or Spanish drama.

Scabbard and Blade

The society of Scabbard and Blade honors outstanding ROTC cadets as well as promotes leadership within the program. Efficient military officers owe much to the training gained through membership in this organization. Major functions this year included co-sponsorship of the Military Ball along with Pershing Rifles, the furnishing of branch insignias to all graduating seniors, and various service projects on the campus and in the community.

Pershing Rifles

ROTC cadets marching around campus with white wooden rifles are easily identifiable as Pershing Rifles pledges. Members of this fraternity got a preview of summer camp routines in special programs held throughout the year. One maneuver involved overnight skirmishes in a wooded area between brothers and pledges. Pershing Rifles provides the Color Guard for home athletic events and annually sends a drill team to a regimental meet in Georgia.

Pub Row Hails Return Of Student Magazine

Headlining the year's events of "Pub Row" was the return of the Student literary magazine after two disheartening years of exile. Influenced by the ardent campaigning of Publications Board members and students interested in the magazine's fate, the administration cast the final vote for reinstatement in March. Pub Row welcomed the reopening of "the office on the end," looking forward to return to normalcy with the reinstatement of the Student.

Pub Row workers recognize that the valuable privilege of editorial freedom must be balanced by mature responsibility. The 1963-64 Publications Board, made up of the editors and business managers of the Old Gold and Black and the Howler, enjoys the able guidance of advisors Edwin G. Wilson and F. F. Folk. Although these faculty members do not directly act on matters pertaining to the operation of the publications, they are always available for opinions and advice when needed.

Each spring, the Pub Board convenes for the all-important task of choosing the following year's editors and business managers. Duties are invariably entrusted to those who have the necessary interest and journalistic ability, with the aspirant's record of past service to the publication weighing heavily in the decision.

An imperious stuffed hawk surveyed the frantic action from his perch high atop a filing cabinet, as the 1964 Howler was snapped, cut, pasted, written, and delivered up piecemeal to the printer in Raleigh.

Early June found the editor and business manager winging their way to Chicago, where planning sessions with the engraver laid blue prints for a book that would encompass Wake Forest's tradition-laden heritage as well as her present and future. With the dummy in hand, staff members pushed production into running gear with class pictures. After October's trip to the old Wake Forest campus for historical sketches, there was the Baptist State Convention to be photographed and put into writing for the Howler. Mid-November also teemed with headline events to be packed into the pages of the yearbook.

Before long, it was Christmas and the Howler office once more played host to the yuletide jollity of the Pub Row Banquet. Exams followed on the heels of the new year, however, and the second semester brought the reality of deadlines dangerously near. Bouts with measles and the U.S. Mail had staff members tearing their hair, but campus police kept watch over late-working coeds and the book was finished in several wee-hour stands.

Devotees finally crammed the last conglomeration of pictures, captions, copy, and headlines into Raleigh-bound envelopes and then sat back to wait. Two months later, their labors were rewarded as cardboard boxes full of the finished product piled up outside the Howler office. Lines of 2,200 Deacons picked up their books and turned over the first few crisp pages and once again, despite the doubts of darker hours, the cycle was completed.

OG&B Mirrors Major Developments of 1964

It was an exciting year for Wake Forest, and the newspaper reflected the vitality and change of a growing college. The staff played an active role in the struggle to have the Trustee Proposal passed at the Baptist State Convention, and the newspaper was on hand, too, back on campus when student protest against the defeat led to an unprecedented swell of school spirit. Old Gold recorded the College's reaction to the death of President Kennedy, and devoted its editorial page to a tribute to the 35th President.

It was also a year of firsts. There was the running debate with members of the North Carolina State Legislature over the Communist Speaker Ban, the founding of "Who Am't" to protest the College's participation in "Who's Who", a threatened investigation of the newspaper by the Student Legislature, and a special edition examining the problems of the College's football program.

Old Gold made some news itself. "Who Am't," the Legislature investigation, the football edition, and an editorial about Chapel conduct received local, state-wide, and, in some cases, national publicity.

And there was the time the associate editor escaped a speeding ticket with the help of Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg. That, too, got national publicity.

Every Thursday and Friday the deadline pressure built up, culminating in mad dashes down Cherry Street to get the copy on the bus to the printer. But the crowd of students at the information desk every Sunday night waiting for their papers, and an All American rating from the Associated Collegiate Press, the Old Gold's 13th straight, made it all worthwhile.

Legislature Sparks New Student Interest

Great change and progress marked 1963-64 student government at Wake Forest. Open legislature meetings, realignment of representation procedures, and election reforms headlined the structural changes that attempted to bring students and student government closer together.

In addition, officials initiated a Leadership Training Program to familiarize students with the workings of student government, a Judicial Board to handle conduct violations, and a Communications Staff to reduce the student-administration gap through publication of the new "Student Voice." Constantly on the trail of campus improvements, the Student Facilities Committee this year began action on snack shop renovation and obtained approval for a new study lounge in the library.

Intercollegiate activities played a major role again this year, with three WF students holding offices in the State Student Legislature. The student government also established ties in Winston-Salem through the Community Relations Committee. The group began by providing companions for children of widowed parents and treating them to a Christmas party.

Chapel Committee's Task Tests Ingenuity

An institution dating back to the founding of Wake Forest College, "Chapel" evokes a debate almost each year concerning its worth. Under the strain of criticism and the growth of the student body in numbers and nature, the bi-weekly gathering has evolved into a chapel-assembly which attempts to retain the features of both.

It is within this mixed atmosphere that the chapel committee strives to schedule programs of interest to each student. Efforts were rewarded in 1963-64, as those who braved the notorious baggage of newspapers included the Honorable Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, Dr. Myron Koenig of the State Department's Foreign Service Institute, and the Reverend Elron Trueblood. Besides specials such as the annual Ugly Man Contest, chapel programs encompassed the entire span of academic life—from theology to science to athletics.

Students who would dispense with this Deacon tradition need only think of its role last fall during the Baptist State Convention, when it served as a rallying point through which the student body achieved its dramatic unity of action.

Rows of empty seats serve as mute reminders of the Chapel Committee's responsibility to provide interesting programs for 120 thousand students.

Orientation Acquaints Newcomers With WFC

A well-planned and directed five day orientation program awaited more than 700 freshman and 100 transfer students upon their arrival at Wake Forest in the fall. Working under the direction of Charles Winberry, a 100 member Orientation Committee sought to ward off homesickness by keeping the new students busy.

From placement tests, to physical tests, to language tests, to tests still unexplained and seemingly useless, they went. Tours of the campus, meetings with their student and faculty advisors, and several social outings characterized the lengthy period. Also held during this time were individual conferences with Honor Council representatives, to acquaint each new student with Wake's honor system.

Jo Honeycutt, Jane Edmunds, Bob Yelton, and Mike McLeod coordinated the various activities making the ceaseless schedule of events fall into place. Special emphasis was placed on the transfer student and his adjustment to a new college, as well as the initial adjustment of the entering collegian. The total program was highlighted by discussion of the new student handbook, an explanation of Wake Forest traditions, and an added emphasis on the individual student.

Clarified Goals Boost Honor Council's Image

Often faced in the past with the stigma of student criticism, the Honor Council this year heightened efforts to bring vitality and support. The six seniors, six juniors, and four sophomores recognized a dual role in their duty of protecting the student body from offenders and also serving as an agent of rehabilitation.

From the very start, the freshman is made aware that Wake Forest is proud of its tradition of honor and honesty. In individual conferences during Orientation, Honor Council members emphasize certain situations of trust which cannot be taken lightly, such as take-home quizzes and unmonitored exams.

Trial by jury and the assumption that a student is innocent until proven guilty are the main principles of Honor Council procedure. Open trials allow the entire campus to observe this "due process of law." Proportionately, however, a small number of cases were tried this year, perhaps indicating a growing respect for the system. Boosts to establishment of understanding included a special Chapel program and a series of analytical articles published in the Old Gold and Black.

Revamped Procedures Draw Coeds' Approval

Women students at Wake Forest have the privilege of both making and enforcing their own regulations through the Women's Government Association. Officers, class representatives, committee chairmen, and house presidents unite to formulate policies and act upon violations of rules. For the first time this year, the WGA added hall counselors in the girls' dorms to aid each floor in solving its own particular problems. Misdemeanors such as messy rooms and noisy radios are ferreted out and acted upon by representatives of the girls themselves, who enforce the rules in order that traditions of neatness and consideration for others may be upheld.

The WGA went even further this year in revamping outdated rules and regulations. Upperclassmen with C averages enjoy unlimited dating privileges, as well as later hours and simplified sign-out procedures. Dean Owen and her assistant, Miss Jane Freeman, are continuing to establish the coed in a new situation of responsibility and self-respect, under the assumption that a college woman is capable of making decisions of her own as long as she does not impinge upon the rights of others or bring discredit upon the reputation of all.

SOCIAL STANDARDS—B. Wiley, J. Shortwell, D. McDougall, S. Patton, T. Stout (Chairman), G. Waitt, J. Brumbaugh, K. Gill.

The Social Standards Committee of the WGA began its activities early in the fall, sponsoring a coke booth for the benefit of incoming freshmen and their parents. To fulfill their purpose of unifying the coed population through wholesome social activities, the members sponsored the presentation of the Magnolia Court, held a bridge party, and hosted two annual dances. The Senior Banquet rounded out a year of service for Social Standards.

Like the proverbial "old woman who lived in a shoe," the Wake Forest housemothers often have so many coeds they "don't know what to do." Serving as full-time hostess, guide, and counselor for scores of college-aged girls is a job to tax anyone's patience, but the Bostwick, Johnson, and Babcock housemothers always manage to discharge their duties hospitably and cheerfully, making Deacons and visitors alike feel right at home.

CU Newsletter Keeps Campus Informed

With the scope of activities greatly expanded this year, the College Union Newsletter was devised to encourage the fullest participation in the planned events.

Often heading the list was the CU lecture program. This year students heard such noted figures as Admiral Arleigh Burke, Dr. William Hesselbaine, and Louis Untermeyer. In mid-March, the third annual CU Symposium was conducted around the theme of "Ethical Implications of American Capitalism." Featured speakers were Dr. W. A. Williams of the University of Wisconsin, Dr. J. L. Adams of Harvard Divinity School, and Mr. Ralph Bradford, a former official of the National Chamber of Commerce.

Week-to-week social needs were adequately met with a series of combo parties at Reynolda Barn. In addition, movies shown every Friday and Saturday offered the student body high-caliber entertainment at no cost.

The Major Functions Committee sponsored the Homecoming dance with Julie London and joined efforts with the WGA to present the annual Magnolia Ball in April. Campus concerts for 1963-64 began with a Hootenanny and followed with the Chad Mitchell Trio and Ferrante & Teicher. In November, a ski trip to Blowing Rock was organized.

The College Union Fine Arts Committee added paintings to its own collection, which was displayed in the specially designed Gallery Lounge of the new Humanities Building. Also featured throughout the year were paintings of alumnus Francis Wayland Spaight and a collection of contemporary prints from Japan.

Marching Deacons is an appropriate name for the sixty high-steppers of the Wake Forest marching band. This group, directed by Mr. Calvin Huber and led by seven majorettes, performed at all home football games. Their season was climaxed by the Homecoming presentation of "Sounds of Broadway."

Another WF marching band is composed of thirty members and made its debut this year at Tuesday-afternoon ROTC drills. More commonly known as the ROTC band, these musicians finished off their year with a trip to the World's Fair.

Capitalizing on balmy weather, the sixty-member concert band and the smaller varsity band presented lawn concerts in the spring to spring-feverish Deacons. The concert group made a tour in March, performing at five high schools and concluding the tour with an evening concert at Warr Chapel. The varsity band, composed of musicians with limited experience or with experience grown rusty with time, serves as a preparatory group for those aspiring to positions in the concert band.

Concluding the array is the stage band, organized last year for the first time. Sixteen winds were joined this season by Miss Jane Burrell, vocalist, for an informal concert in Reynolda Hall during the latter part of the spring.

The remaining instrumental group under the direction of Mr. Huber concentrates on music of a more serious nature. Sixteen members form the nucleus of the Wake Forest Little Symphony. These players were often joined by wind instruments from the band and accompanied the choir in the presentation of the annual Christmas Vesper service.

The college bands, housed in the basement of the gymnasium, have grown and expanded this year in both quality and numbers.

Fifty-six black-robed choir members, under the direction of Dr. Thane McDonald, highlighted many Chapel programs throughout the year. The Gloria by Vivaldi climaxed the twenty-fifth annual Christmas Vesper Service, which honored Donald L. Pföhl, originator of the program. For the first time, the choir made a recording of this Christmas service.

On a more mobile note, the touring choir, made up of thirty-six selected members, rolled out on its seventeenth annual spring tour. In April they traveled southward, paying singing visits from Anniston, Alabama to Atlanta, Georgia. Their program included a motet by Johannes Brahms, American spirituals, and folk music. The "Singing Deacons" male quartet also accompanies the touring choir, and the twelve voices of the Madrigals round out the number of travelers. Also performing for civic groups and clubs in and around Winston-Salem, the hand-picked Madrigals specialize in sixteenth and seventeenth century music of secular origin.

The choir presented a special musical program in the spring and also sang during the Magnolia festival.

WFDD Broadcasts "Voice of Wake Forest"

The mellow strains of WFDD accompanied study-sessions from Babcock to Potter this year, as students tuned their radios to 650 on the dial. For thirty hours a week, from six o'clock until midnight, the varied programs touched upon student interests from campus news and sports to standard and classical music. In addition, educational and cultural discussions were carried directly to students.

WFDD kept the campus aware of events taking place elsewhere as well as making college activities known outside the community. "This is Wake Forest" was broadcast over forty stations throughout North Carolina. Besides bringing the controversial Baptist State Convention "live" from Wilmington, the station contributed fifteen minute dramas to the curriculum of the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County Schools. WFDD also maintained an extensive record library.

Under the able leadership of Dr. Julian Burroughs, the WFDD student staff was larger than ever this year and assumed more control over programming and planning the station's broadcasts.

Bill Marks, as "Lilium," meets his final judgment in the august personage of Johannes Rosenthal

"The rain in Spain" turned out to be showers of success, as the College Theater presented its two-week run of My Fair Lady. Spectators arrived from as far away as Illinois and New York to see this musical's first amateur production and first arena staging in the nation. Other major plays, directed by Mr. James Walton and Mr. Bruce Hooper, included Lilium and two one-act plays, A Phoenix Too Frequent and Madame Butterfly.

In addition to presenting regular works, the players in 1963-64 helped with the high school speech festival, traveled to Charlotte to attend an oral religious interpretation, and continued with the laboratory theater project. The latter was a series of eight one-act plays directed by the students themselves.

The Reader's Theater, initiated last year, was another feature of the group this year. In December these students presented an interpretation of the Christmas story without the use of dialogue.

The College Theater concluded its season with an awards banquet. Leaders Martha McClure and B. C. May rapped new members into the honor fraternity, National Collegiate Players. In addition, a few outstanding students connected with dramatic work received the Purple Mask, the highest award possible in the theater.

ACC Champion Debaters Travel 75,000 Miles

Debate coach, Franklin R. Shirley, reviews travel arrangements for extensive itinerary accrued by the team in 1964.

The Wake Forest debate team accrued an admirable record this year as it represented the College in competition with schools all over the United States, traveling a total of 75,000 miles to attend contests out of the state.

In the annual ACC tournament, the team kept the first place record it has held for the past three years. In WF's own Dixie Classic Tournament all three Deacon teams participated and were first place winners. In addition, the team placed among the top eight out of 75 in the Northwestern University meet and took second place awards at both Richmond and South Carolina.

Participating in an average of two tournaments each month, the team primarily debated the topic, "Resolved: That the Federal Government should guarantee the opportunity for higher education to all qualified high school graduates." Dr. Franklin R. Shirley, chairman of the speech department, served as debate coach.

The University of Tennessee hosted the district tournament of Tau Kappa Alpha, the national forensic fraternity to which the Wake Forest debate squad belongs. The team also traveled to Butler University in Indiana for regional fraternity competition.

BSU Offers Service "In Christian Context"

The familiar sight of the BSU bus on campus signalled a busy year for the Baptist Student Union. Activities were varied and touched upon many areas in an effort to "provide academic excellence in a Christian context."

The year's events opened with a pre-school retreat at Camp Laurel Ridge, where students contemplated the issue, "What Is the Meaning of Christianity?" Back at school, monthly supper forums were highlighted by lively discussions and speakers from the faculty, community, and churches elsewhere in the state. Daily vespers were held in Davis Chapel, featuring, especially meaningful services during the Advent and Easter seasons.

The Missions Projects Committee held as its ultimate goal this year the sponsorship of a student to Korea. Joe Clontz will join other N. C. Baptist students this summer in helping to build a community center in a small Korean village. Among other campaigns, the sale of popcorn and doughnuts during study breaks in the girls' dorms added to the funds for this project.

The BSU also carried on worthwhile mission projects in the Winston-Salem area, including worship services at the home for the aged and activity programs for children of local Negro and white churches.

Cullom Ministerial Conference

Founded by Dr. Willis Cullom to familiarize young ministers with church work, the Ministerial Conference this year achieved its aim through certain "live" situations. These included weekly visits to Resthaven Home for the Aged and weekend preaching trips throughout the state. Members competed in two annual public speaking competitions and also played host to distinguished guests Ralph Elliott, Wayne Oates, and George Griffin.

Christian Education Club

The Christian Education Club provides an opportunity for Christian service both to students who plan to enter the ministry professionally and to those who are simply interested in helping others. The varied institutions to which the interdenominational club ministered include the Hayes Old Folk's Home and the Patterson Avenue Mission. In addition, members helped with groups of underprivileged children and the mentally retarded.

Young Women's Auxiliary

An organization for coeds of any denomination, the YWA offers information and opportunities to girls interested in Christian service. Monthly supper meetings usually featured a guest speaker who worked in the missions field. The fall emphasis was on Korea. Second semester, YWA investigated mission work in the Winston-Salem area. The main community project for the year was making toys for the pediatric clinic at Baptist Hospital.

Organ Guild

Wake's Organ Guild is a student branch of the American Guild of Organists, and is sponsored by the Winston-Salem chapter. To foster interest in organ playing, the group this year attended recitals given by the national organization and also visited various places in the city to test different kinds of organs. Several of the ten members originated and presented an organ recital of their own composition in March.

Delta Sigma Pi

Officers: R. Pulliam, Treasurer, R. Newsome, Secretary, J. Carter, President.

Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity, attempts to learn as much as possible about the field of business before venturing into it on an occupational basis. Membership is open to those senior and junior members of the Business School who maintain a "C" average.

The year's activities for the Gamma Nu chapter included an industrial tour of Wilmington during the Azalea Festival, a doughnut sale, and participation in intramural sports. The Delta Sigma Pi team won the campus bowling trophy for the 1963-64 season.

Twenty-three pledges, the largest number in the organization's history, sold programs at the Homecoming game as a special pledge class project. Delta Sigma Pi's candidate for Homecoming Queen was Rosemary Greenwood.

To increase their knowledge of the business world, the members played host to a lecture series and also to outstanding businessmen from the Winston-Salem area. Speakers included Mr. Stuart Vaughn from Alex-Brown Stockbrokers and Mr. Z. T. Bryum, an accountant from Ernst & Ernst.

Members proved to be no "Scrooges," as they gave parties throughout the year for underprivileged children and for the Red Shield Boys' Club.

Alpha Kappa Psi

Alpha Kappa Psi enjoys the distinction of being America's oldest and largest professional business fraternity. The Gamma Delta chapter chartered at Wake Forest College selects new members each year from the ranks of business majors. In the selection process, the committee considers each individual's quality of academic performance and his professional interest in business.

Throughout the year, to further define and develop the interest that the members hold in the current affairs of the business world, Alpha Kappa Psi sponsors various field trips and seminars. These activities cover a wide range of commercial fields from marketing and production to personnel and finance.

Fraternity members count among their most valuable activities the establishment of interrelationships with professional people in and around the Twin City. Alpha Kappa Psi was honored this year by a visit from Dr. C. Eugene Looper, senior vice-president and director of personnel at Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Another Winston-Salem businessman who spoke to the group was Mr. O. A. Kirkman, president of H. T. & D. Railroad.

Young Democrats Club

Centering around the orientation of college-aged voters to the principles of the Democrat Party, the program of the Wake Forest YDC concentrated this year on preparations for the 1964 elections. Meetings featured such outstanding Democratic speakers as Tom I. Davis, L. Richardson Preyer, and Dr. I. Beverly Lake. In November, Charles Wimberry was elected chairman of the North Carolina College YDC at the state convention in Charlotte.

Young Republicans Club

YRC activities for the year focused on the 1964 campaign, as 5th district congressional candidate Wyatt "Nab" Armfield addressed the group in February on party issues for both congressional and national elections. Twelve members attended the state YRC convention in Durham this year, at which Jim Bancroft was elected vice-chairman. Ten Wake members also served as sergeants-at-arms for the N. C. State Republicans convention in Greensboro.

Sponsored by the Winston-Salem Kiwanis Club, Circle K serves the campus and community. Bi-monthly supper meetings often feature guest speakers, such as Jim Rush of the Journal-Sentinel. In September, members greeted freshman boys with their room keys and escorted them to their dormitory assignments, as a special service. Another such project was the setting up of signs throughout the Twin City directing the way to the Wake Forest campus.

Alpha Phi Omega

In serving the college, community, and nation, APO this year launched a local Cystic Fibrosis drive on campus and in surrounding Winston-Salem. Proceeds from the Ugly Man Contest as well as from an APO-staffed campaign both at the Dixie Classic Fair went towards combating this disease. Other projects included publication of a student-faculty directory, and co-sponsorship of the Christmas party for underprivileged children.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA—Front row: H. Wright, F. Young, B. Brady, A. Rubio, W. Vernor, H. Whiteside, L. Combs, C. Singhas. Second row: L. Arnold, R. Davis, D. Nichols, J. Gaskill, J. Hall, W. ## YAF

Young Americans for Freedom is the country's largest young conservative organization for political education and action. Established on the Wake Forest campus in October, the group proposes to stimulate political activity and promote conservative principles in government. Current plans include speakers, movies, and publications. YAF will also work with the national and state-level organizations in carrying out its goals.

SOLTA

Under the sponsorship of Professor Jivan Tabibian, the Student Organization for Liberal Thought and Action was established at Wake Forest in the fall. SOLTA is not affiliated with any national group and was formed to further liberalism in political issues on campus.

The first meetings were concerned with procedural matters, as the twelve official members wrote a formal constitution and planned for future activities.

SOLTA—Front row: B. Vernor, J. Emery, B. Dorsey. Second row: C. Roberts, A. Hunt, B. Brunbach, L. Arnold. Back row: S. Patton, M. Forney, J. West, D. Coath, R. Mills, J. Judd.

English Club

Composed primarily of English majors and faculty, the English Club explores the work of authors not covered in college courses, with emphasis on contemporary material.

The club this year conducted panel discussions and entertained such speakers as Dr. J. Bowers, Shakespearian expert from the University of Virginia. In conjunction with the Honors Program, members also viewed films of "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

National Education Association

Formerly known as Future Teachers of America, this group began a new year under the auspices of the National Education Association. The purpose of the college branch is to promote the concept of professionalism in the field of teaching.

Panels, movies, and speakers are directed toward preparing the future educator. This year Eugene Johnson, Assistant Superintendent of Winston-Salem and Forsyth County Schools, addressed the group on secondary school principles.

NEA—Front row: K. Bernhart, J. Justice, J. Wackerbarth, B. Higgins, A. Ferry. Second row: F. Wood, J. Chambers, J. Daniels, L. Scawell, C. Hedgepath. Back row: F. Ernst, M. Allen, J. Ayres, D. Fisher.

Maritimers

The twenty members of Maritimers seek to learn, practice, and demonstrate the art of water ballet. A major activity this year was the presentation of a Christmas show at the annual holiday party for underprivileged children. Including African and Spanish numbers, the show was highlighted by a "Bonanza" routine which later appeared on three television newsreels. Maritimers' spring show used the theme and music of "the sea."

Orchesis

Nineteen girls participated in the Orchesis Dance Club's fall concert, presented in December around the theme "Metaphors." Included were solo and group numbers in the interpretation of moods such as Meditation and Sorrow. Open to any girl who is interested, membership this year increased greatly over last year's. Weekly meetings consisted of dance exercises, instruction in original choreography, and trips to view dance clubs at other schools.

MONOGRAM CLUB—Front row: J. Mackovic, G. Adams, J. Surgener, B. Via, D. Miller, F. Ernst, B. Piccolo, T. Meredith, J. Tejcek. Second row: R. Watts, J. Israel, B. Parsley, W. Noell, R. ## Monogram Club

The earning of a varsity letter in athletic participation is the key to membership in Wake's Monogram Club. Located in Huffman Dorm, the headquarters also include a number of rooms where senior members may take up regular residence. Campus activities sponsored by this group included the Homecoming Queen Contest and halftime ceremony, and the traditional pre-season Old Gold and Black basketball game between the varsity and freshman squads.

Women's Physical Education Club

Women students majoring in physical education with an eye toward teaching gain valuable professional training through the Women's Physical Education Club. In addition to attending two monthly meetings, members journeyed to Washington, D. C. in May for the club's National Convention. To fulfill their purpose of promoting interest in health, physical education, and recreation, the Women's P. E. Club supported various athletic events on campus.

DELTA KAPPA NU Front row: M. Jackson, B. Jordan, B. Brewer. Back row: F. Rittenhouse, T. Carter, S. Webb, B. Menne.

Delta Kappa Nu

Women business majors in the Delta Kappa Nu society heard employees of local firms speak on the opportunities now open to women in the commercial world. Careers from accounting to advertising were investigated, and trips downtown provided for personal inspection of businesses. Delta Kappa Nu members also were hostesses at the Business School's Management Seminar and made their services available as assistants to professors in the department.

Madrigals

The Madrigal singers, a select group of twelve voices ranging from bass to soprano, are attempting to make this dignified art form a regular part of the music department. Taking their name from the madrigal, a pastoral-type song with moving parts, the group this year accompanied the touring choir on its trips and also performed at the Faculty Wives' Banquet and at their own Chapel concert during the Christmas season.

INDEPENDENT COUNCIL—Officers Sated: J. Avery, K. Cline, Secretary; J. Lewis, President, C. Everett, Vice-President; B. McNeely, Treasurer. Standing: E. Wood, E. Bradshaw, S. McLamb.

Independent Council

When the Independent Council was formed in the spring of 1961, few people could have foreseen the status this organization would achieve by 1964. Originally formed to satisfy the political and social needs of the Independent men and women that form the majority of the Wake Forest student body, the group has now become an accepted and integral part of campus activities.

Service to both the Independents and the College community is evident in reviewing the Council's activities. The improved Intra-Campus Mail Service provides fast delivery of mail to any spot on campus at no cost to the student. Operated by the IDC, this facility was especially popular during the Christmas and Valentine seasons.

The IDC joined with the College Union this year to sponsor the Homecoming Dance. In addition, the organization received special honors when Homecoming candidate Kathy Cline was crowned Queen during the halftime ceremony.

Under the auspices of the Council, Independents organize athletic teams for year-round participation in Wake's intramural program, vying with fraternities and rival Independent teams for campus championships.

The Independent-sponsored intra-campus mail service provides for prompt communications to any spot on campus.

FRATERNITIES

Solemn initiation services symbolize the entrance of a Wake Forest man into the brotherhood of fraternity life. In 1964, as Greek chapters on campus develop new concepts of what they stand for, emphasis turns from such time-worn images of the social fraternity as beer blasts and hazing to more constructive activities such as intramural athletics and Sunday - afternoon open houses. Scholastic achievement is another indication of this changing emphasis: quality-point ratios are higher for frat men in 1964 than ever before, and academic trophies sit beside athletic awards in chapter rooms from Kitchen to Taylor. Social functions, however, are by no means outdated. In addition to the normal round of combo parties and serenades, Mid-winters provides an entire weekend of festivities to lighten the January lull, and spring brings the annual Greek Week events. Competition is keen but it's all in the spirit of brotherhood as members vie for the trophy awarded to the best all-round fraternity.

Interfraternity Council

Long before the first freshmen arrived on campus in the fall, the Interfraternity Council secretary was at work sending rush brochures to each incoming boy. When September brought the hoordes back from summer vacation, there were the ever-present smoker schedules, rush rules, and pledge night plans to coordinate. With a bumper crop of frosh in 1963, fraternity men found rush season a very strenuous but stimulating experience. After many weeks of parties, smokers, and bull sessions, however, the bids went out, the pledges poured in, and things settled somewhat down to normal.

The IFC, led by President Lee Smstein, found plenty of other activities to occupy the following months. After Homecoming in November and a Midwinters Dance in January featuring the Shirelles, the organization made plans for the annual Greek Week activities in Mid-March.

Turning to more serious matters, representatives Walt Dorman and Butch Lennon journeyed to New York City for the overall IFC conference. A weekend of carefully planned meetings and events concerned all phases of fraternity life on a national level.

A feature of Fraternity activity is individual highlights that attract campus interest such as the Kappa Alpha Old South Ball and Lambda Chi Dog Day.

Every year the Ugly Man Contest allows the student body to name the fraternity whose representative is the ugliest.

Greek Week Features Spartan-Style Events

Greek Week activities in mid-March turned attention out-of-doors after a long winter of indoor confinement. This year the usual fraternity sing, tug-of-war, and pole climb were joined by a special series of Olympic-type events. In the grand old fashion of the ancient Spartans, Greeks combined tricycle and roller-skate contests into a relay race that captivated post-chapel crowds on the perimeter of the Plaza.

The main event was the chariot race, in which individual fraternities concocted their own noble vehicles out of any and everything they could find lying around the houses. These self-styled buggies were then hitched to especially husky members of their ranks, who chugged up the western slope in competition for top honors.

As a special feature, the IFC crowned a "Miss Helen of Troy" from representatives of the five coed societies.

The Chariot Race on the steep hills of Reynoka was a highlight of the Greek Week Festival Days.

The Tug of War allows fraternities to test both their skill and their mind endurance.

Everyone remained after chapel on Greek Week Tuesday to witness the "Wake Forest 500."

The Shirelles were the principal attraction at the midweekers dance on Friday night

The moment of pledging culminates a hard rush period for brothers and a hectic decision for those whom they pick.

Fraternities Embody Brotherhood Spirit

Pretty girls, ugly boys, and lots of dogs all contributed their parts to making fraternity life at Wake Forest a well-rounded picture in 1963-64. The big weekends—with dances, games, and special events filling up the hours between noon on Friday and Sunday night—were only a small segment of the total story. Greeks put just as much emphasis on upholding long-standing traditions and establishing wholesome community ties.

The helping hand, extended to humans and canines alike, is symbolic of the principle of brotherhood embodied in each of the ten social fraternities on campus. "A place to come home to" means a lot to those Wake Forest men who choose the fraternity way, the close companionships, all-night bull sessions, and solemn initiation ceremonies will stand out in Deacon memories long after the combo has packed up and gone home.

Miss Sandra Sox

The Lettermen after the Lazen Concert visited with the brothers of Alpha Sig.

Alpha Sigma Phi

Alpha Sigma Phi enjoyed its most successful year since moving to Winston-Salem, as the year began with the pledging of 23 freshmen and sophomores.

Tanglewood Park, the Parkway Chaler, and the Hotel Robert E. Lee were the scenes of numerous fraternity parties held throughout the year. The chapter won third place in the Homecoming decorations contest and brother Bob Dannecker was also named the Campus Ugly Man.

Alpha Sigs treated the house to new interior decorations and, with the purchase of a new stereo, depleted the treasury. The end of the year brought the traditional long-distance phone call to Paris.

Sports fans, one and all, the brothers stomped the unfortunate pledges 6-2 in the annual football battle. Jim Speas and Gerald Starling starred on the intramural basketball team and scored many buckets to lead the Alpha Sigs to victory. In softball, it was Bill Pollard who led the team.

The social year ended with the annual Black and White formal held at Southern Pines. Brothers from both North and South Carolina joined the Wake Forest chapter for this big event.

The mascot of the chapter passed in front of the stone marking the home for many students.

Miss Betty Morrison

Delta Sigma Phi

Beta Lambda chapter began the year at a furious pace with two successful rush parties, a smoker, and the pledging of 28 fine men.

Delta Sig's own 'Tribble, "Zack," kept the brothers happy with conbo parties throughout the first semester, in addition to the Carnation Ball held in Greensboro in December with the Sigs from Duke, State, and ACC. Homecoming occupies a special place in memories and scrapbooks of the Delta Sigs, as long hours of hard work resulted in the "Drive Out the Gamecocks" display in front of the house. Along with the second semester came "Mouse" who continued to provide well-planned parties. The annual Playboy Party in March and the Sailors' Ball Weekend at Cherry Grove Beach rounded out the social calendar.

Chapter activities were often graced with beautiful women, but none lovelier than Betty Morrison, the fraternity sweetheart. Also representing the Delta Sigs were Betty Lewis, homecoming candidate, and Sylvia Strickland, Miss Baby Deac entry.

Chapter activities came to an end with the alumni banquet and the traditional dinner honoring graduating Delta Sig seniors.

Delta Sigs put last-minute touches on prize-winning Homecoming decoration on the front of the house.

The negative vote of 1106 North Carolina Baptists brought worshipful reaction from the brothers.

Kappa Alpha

Traditions are strong in the "fraternity of the South" and none of them more revered than the annual Old South Ball—this year held in Asheville in mid-March. The bearded Kappa Alpha brothers sported Confederate uniforms and waxed face ornaments for a memorable showing.

1963 began big in the sports area with victories on the football field resulting in both fraternity and non-fraternity championships. Once again, Tau chapter received the Interfraternity Council Sports Award.

The Rose Ball highlighted the social year with a special celebration held in honor of the chapter's 41st anniversary. Other social events this year were held at the Barn, Tanglewood Park, and the Jewish Country Club.

The bond of fraternity membership was extended to Lutz Reminsland, German exchange student, who took an active part in KA activities. Jim Self, chapter president, and Allan Haryn were awarded the coveted Reynolds Scholarships to attend the Bowman Gray School of Medicine. More than the usual number of serenades rounded out the year for these sons of Robert F. Lee.

Kappa Sigma

Once again Kappa Sigma enjoyed a prominent position in all phases of campus activity. Within the realm of athletics Kappa Sigma was well represented; William Faircloth was captain of the football team, Richard Carmichael was a tri-captain of the basketball team, Ken Folkes was selected to the All-American golf team, and Drew Taylor won the ACC diving championship.

Many Kappa Sigs also served as campus leaders. Bill Straughan, fraternity president, also headed the senior class. Butch Lemon was elected vice-president of the JFC. Mickey Taylor worked in student legislature, and Earl Taylor served on the honor council.

Kappa Sigma, greatly emphasizing leadership and scholarship, held a banquet in January at which alumni Dr. Harold Tribble and Dean Edwin Wilson presented awards to deserving brothers recognized for their contributions in campus life.

The social realm, however, was surely not neglected. Several combo parties were held featuring "The Fabulous Five," "The Casuals," and at the annual Star and Crescent, Maurice Williams and "The Zodiacs."

Other fraternity activities included the annual Christmas party for underprivileged children and Parent's Day.

Lambda Chi brothers started the year off right by painting the House.

Lambda Chi Alpha

Lambda Chi Alpha found 1963-64 an exceptionally big year. Nationwide publicity was accorded the chapter for its annual "Dog Day," when 57 homeless mongrels found homes in the Twin City. Also lauded were the hopeful but futile attempts of the "Bird with the Word," W. Dann Renn, to get the "Beatles" to town.

A freshly decorated and re-paneled chapter room and a new TV set helped rushing plans, which culminated in 26 men deciding on the Lambda way.

Dr. Claude H. Richards, esteemed faculty advisor, was honored at the White Rose Ball which was the highlight of the social year. Other parties which provided both noise and fun for the Lambdas featured "The Continentals," "The Catalinas," and "The 13 Screemers."

The Apple Polishing Banquet, attended by fraternity members and faculty favorites, was enhanced by the attendance of the national president, Dr. Lee F. Tuttle. It was the first time that a national president had ever visited the Wake Forest chapter.

The chapter also sponsored for the first time a faculty tea. At Christmas this year, brothers and their dates serenaded at the Old Folks Home.

Pi Kappa Alpha

"The House that Brotherhood Built" was in full swing this year. A new balance of campus, cultural, civic, and community activities highlighted 1963-64, under the direction of President Dave "Razor" Forsythe.

The chapter adopted John Yokunias, an 11-year-old Greek boy, under the foster parent's plan. Monthly letters had a special place on the bulletin board, and each month the Pikas sent food, books, and clothing to their little "Brother" overseas.

Activities started early with a rush party in Raleigh where over 50 freshman were entertained by the area's favorite combo. The chapter room, the community center, and Reynolds Park were all scenes of other social events held throughout the year. A party with "gag" gifts for Pikas and their dates highlighted the Christmas season. Santa Claus and a group of underprivileged children were special guests of the chapter.

Dr. C. B. Earp, chapter advisor, held a dinner for all the brothers who made Dean's List during the first semester. Further efforts were made to strengthen student-faculty relations by inviting several professors to speak in the house.

The Dream Girl Weekend held in May closed out another memorable year for the Gamma Phi chapter.

Sigma Chi

The "Home of the White Cross" began the year in top-notch fashion, capturing the 1962-63 Wake Forest fraternity scholarship award and the scholarship award for the Carolinas Province of Sigma Chi.

An extensive rushing program greeted incoming freshmen. All members turned out to help with a redecoration project and even fraternity president, Jerry Attkisson, could be seen wielding a paint brush in an attempt to add color to the reception room. The climax of the rushing program was a hayride and "Farmer's Party" with over one hundred fifty persons in attendance. Sigma Chi rush efforts were rewarded by the pledging of 23 new boys.

Throughout the year the Sigma Chis continued to receive publicity and good will from their 1963 Derby Day. The television room exhibited a display of pictures taken by Life Magazine of this event. The 1964 Derby Day attendance was the highest on record and the program brought campus-wide enthusiasm.

Preceded by a serenade to chapter sweetheart Janet Mackie, the annual Sweetheart Ball was held the first weekend in May. This event was the highlight of a full and very enjoyable social year for the Sigma Chis.

The "Chis" enjoy many weekends partying it up in the house or at Tanglewood.

Derby Day brought fun for the brothers and amusement for the remainder of the campus.

Basketball was a big part of Sig Ep activity as they captured the All-Campus Championship.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

1963-64 was a most active year for the Sig Eps, with many of the brothers participating in athletics. Brothers Bill Scripture and Walt Nowell were selected to the All-ACC baseball team; Scripture was also elected to the first team All-American in baseball. On the fraternity level, brothers were leaders in several sports. Rick Hill won the cross-campus race, and brothers Hill, Wilson, Kraus, and Hoyle set a new IFC record for the mile relay. To climax these fine athletic efforts, the Sig Eps again won the all-campus basketball championship.

The fraternity house was the scene for many get-togethers, none of which was more successful than the Pajama Party. Various other parties were held throughout the year with some "colorful" combos. Rounding off the social year was the annual Sig Ep Ball held in Charlotte with the chapters from North and South Carolina.

The Sig Eps were honored this year by the visits of Bedford Black, a past national president and alumnus of the chapter. Mr. Black's visits were very rewarding to all who had the opportunity of speaking with him.

The high point of the year was the decisive victory over the Pikas in the interfraternity snowball fight.

In typical Roman fashion, "Squirrel" Marshall commands his chariot to win the race.

Sigma Pi

"Help Week" for an unusually top-flight group of pledges began an active second semester for the "Pi's." A car wash, a scavenger hunt, a house clean-up, a trip to the Home for the Aged, and a chance to take part in civic activities were the highlights of a successful new approach to the problem of initiation.

To begin the year, "The 13 Screamers" shook the rafters during a rush party at the Moose Lodge. Halloween was the time for a costume party at the house, and in December came the Sigma Pi light bulb sale concluding with the 16th annual Christmas Stag Party at the IOG.

May 1-3 was the date of the annual Orchid Ball, with the formal dinner and dance held Saturday night at the Parkway Chalet. Preceding it was a picnic at Tanglewood and a Friday night dance at the infamous Holiday Inn. The featured event was the crowning of the new orchid girl to succeed Marjorie Greco.

Other festivities were the Roaring Twenties Ball in February, the Greek Week party, and record parties with blankets at Tanglewood on spring weekends. A salute to the seniors at Staley's Charcoal Steak House concluded a year of social events and expansive brotherhood.

Theta Chi

Upon returning to school in September, the brothers became engrossed in the most extensive rush program Gamma Omicron has ever promoted, with these rush efforts resulting in the largest pledge class on campus.

Homecoming festivities saw the Theta Chi chapter transformed into a circus, complete with a pink elephant, a giraffe, and a ferocious pigmy. Homecoming was also highlighted by brother Hap Bulger, the Theta Chi's Ugly Man, whose feathered gamecock and profound prophecies of victory proved to be a spark that helped get school spirit behind the football team.

The social calendar was filled with various parties throughout the year, December was the month of the annual Christmas party for the Children's Home orphans, and January brought the annual Sword and Serpent Weekend. In February, the ever-popular Hillbilly party was another hit.

This eventful year was completed by the big Mason-Dixon Jubilee, held at State College in April, and the annual Dream Girl Dance, which followed in May.

ATHLETICS

After extensive surveys and long hours spent over smoky conference tables, the vital decision is made at last: Wake will re-emphasize, not de-emphasize, her athletic program. Wake sports, as a consequence, meet 1964 with surprising shake-ups in nearly every varsity field. The change is felt right away, as officials foster football hopes with a new coach from far-off Illinois. When winter forces red-stockinged spectators indoors, the Coliseum is the setting for another season of outstanding college basketball. The Deacon five play "Jack and the Beanstalk" for a night, staging an upset over top-ranking Duke. Meanwhile, the spirit of renovation stirs the spring-sports set, with baseball and golf copping ACC titles. Swimming, track, and tennis also thrive in '64, striving for equality despite their minor status. Altogether, more than 200 athletes work toward Deacon victories in ACC competition.

Wake Forest suffered another disastrous football season in 1963. The Demon Deacons stumbled to a 1-9 record, the fourth consecutive losing season at Wake Forest. The Deacons' only victory, a 20-19 conquest of South Carolina at Homecoming, snapped the nation's longest losing streak of 18 games. Statistics show both Wake's offensive and defensive inferiority. The Deacons gained 1,650 yards on offense while the ten opponents amassed 4,045 yards, punted 74 times while the opposition kicked 44 times on fourth down, and scored 37 points while the other teams tallied 318.

Wake's opening game of the season was an omen of the folly to follow. On a hot, sticky Saturday evening in September, East Carolina upset the Deacons 20-10 at Greenville. Junior Brian Piccolo scored all of Wake's points, kicking a 21-yard field goal in the first quarter and scoring a second-period touchdown on a three-yard scamper around left end.

Wake's much-publicized junior college transfer quarterback, Karl Sweetan, made his debut in the second game of the season against VPI. The Texas passing whiz did not make much difference, however, as the Deacons lost, 27-0. It was the first of seven shut-outs Wake was to experience during the year. The Deacs fought on near-even terms with the Gobblers for more than one half, but two long runs by VPI quarterback Bob Schweickert — a 63-yard sprint and a 25-yard touchdown gallop late in the third quarter broke the contest open. A Bowman Gray Stadium crowd of 7,000 people sat in a downpour and watched the two teams fumble the ball 17 times.

Gator Bowl-bound North Carolina handed Wake its thirteenth straight loss. The Deacs could not contain the passing and running of Tar Heel quarterbacks Junior Edge and Gary Black and fell, 21-0, on a cold autumn night at Bowman Gray Stadium. The Deacons next traveled to Tallahassee, Florida, to meet Florida State. The weather was warmer, but the Deacons remained cold. Florida State, taking advantage of two bad passes in the second quarter, romped to a 35-0 win. A crowd of 15,000 shirt-sleeved fans sat in balmy 72-degree weather and watched Seminole quarterback Steve Tensi pass for three touchdowns. The Deacs, hopelessly outmanned, could mount only one insignificant drive the entire game.

The following Saturday saw the Deacs at the opposite end of the eastern seaboard at West Point, New York. Army rushed for an amazing 501 yards (compared to Wake's 66-yard rushing total) and a whopping 47-0 victory. Karl Sweetan's dramatic passing and punting (once a 60-yard kick) thrilled the 30,200 sun-soaked spectators, the largest crowd to see Wake in action the entire season, but Sweetan alone was not enough to win a ball game, and the Deacs lost their fifteenth in a row. Wake then returned home as Maryland, behind quarterback Dick Shiner and flanker back Daryl Hill, white-washed Wake, 32-0. A sparse Parents Day crowd of 5,000 fans saw Shiner connect on 11 out of 19 passes for 118 yards, and Hill tally 14 points on two touchdowns and two extra points.

Clemson handed Wake Forest its sixth consecutive shut-out the following Saturday, 36-0. Playing in the 'Tigers' famed Death Valley, the Deacon ends dropped one Sweetan pass after another. Wake's several scoring opportunities were squelched by tenacious Tiger defenses.

The next game brought another defeat, but Wake was not without its moment of glory. With the aid of two penalties, the Deacons actually led Duke 7-0 on the Blue Devils' home field. Brian Piccolo kicked into the end zone from the six yard line a cap a 59-yard drive and boost the Deacs to a first-quarter lead. But the score was short-lived, as the powerful Duke came back and coasted to a 39-7 win, their twelfth in a row over a Wake Forest team.

After two futile years the Deacs finally scored a win at the expense of South Carolina. Fired by 1,200 students who swept down to the practice field to cheer them the Thursday afternoon before the Homecoming contest, they overcame a two-touchdown deficit to nip the Gamecocks, 20-19. A 19-yard Sweetan to Teejck pass, a six-yard plunge by Piccolo, and a spine-tingling five-yard end sweep on fourth down by Sweetan late in the game gave the Deacs the win. The victory hungry crowd of 7,000 fans engulfed the players after the game, forgetting the season's previous losses and ripping goal posts out of the ground. Wake Forest sophomore saw their first Deacon football victory. The Wake win was splashed on sports pages across the country, and Hildebrand was named college football's Coach of the Week. "The sky is bluer, the grass greener, and the world looks much rosier," said Hildy after the game.

But Hildebrand's picture was defaced with one sweep of the brush the following week. In the final game of the season N. C. State blanked Wake 42-0 on a chilly Saturday night in Raleigh. The Liberty Bowl-bound Wolfpack dominated the game, running roughshod over the Deacon line.

Wake Forest alumni, dissatisfied with Coach Bill Hildebrand's four year record (7-32) which drew crowds averaging less than 8,000 spectators at Deacon home games, pressured the school for a revitalized athletic program. As a result, athletic director Bill Gibson and Hildebrand were fired. Former All-American baseball player Gene Hooks and University of Illinois assistant coach Bill Tate were hired to fill the respective vacancies. Tate wasted no time in carrying out his program to bring an ACC championship to Wake Forest "in four years." The former college full-back, named to the football Hall of Fame for his performance in the 1955 Rose Bowl, immediately added an extra man to his coaching staff. Tate then announced that he would begin recruiting school football talent on a nationwide basis and would begin recruiting Negroes—procedures never before attempted at Wake Forest. With a near-complete turnover of the football coaching staff, Deacon fans look forward to the rise of Deacon teams from the depths of ACC football in the following years.

Wake Cagers Again Take Second Place In ACC Competition

The teams of Wake Forest coach, Horace "Bones" McKinney, are well-known for their patented slow starts and fast finishes. The 1964 Deacon edition was no exception. The team sputtered in December with a 4-3 record, stalled in January with a 2-5 mark, then sped through the month of February with an 8-2 record. The Deacs won their last nine of 11 games, jumping from last to second place in the ACC. Finishing with an overall 16-11 record, the quintet accrued an 11-6 tally in league play. It was Bone's fifth consecutive winning season at Wake Forest, and brought his seven-year term at Deaconland to 110-79.

The team this year compiled several other interesting statistics. The Deacs scored on 773 of 1,659 shots from the floor for a .466 team field goal shooting percentage, the third best in the history of the school. Wake also made the finals of the ACC tournament before losing to Duke. This marked the seventh time a Deacon team has gone that far in the tournament, an ACC record. Wake's 8-2 record at Memorial Coliseum brought its nine year home court tally to an impressive 62-20.

Each of the five Wake Forest starters finished the season with averages in double figures, Frank Christie compiling the top average of 16.1. Closely following were Bob Leonard with 14.4 points per game; Ronnie Watts, 13.8; Butch Hassell, 13.6; and Richard Carmichael, 10.7. As for individual honors, senior tri-captain Frank Christie ended a spectacular career with 48 points in the three tournament games and 434 points for the season for a three-year total of exactly 1,000 points. This earned Christie entrance into Wake's 1,000-Point Club, an honor previously awarded to only eight other players. Christie's consistent play brought him a berth on the All-ACC first team. Senior guard Butch Hassell and junior center Ronnie Watts were named to the second team.

The Deacs started their season on a sour note with a 66-53 loss to Davidson at Charlotte. The Wildcats, however, wound up the season as the nation's No. 10 team. Davidson was one of five teams Wake played that either ranked in the Top Ten or represented their conference in post-season championships.

Following the mistake-riddled game with Davidson, Wake met N. C. State at Raleigh. The Wolfpack, playing its typical slow-down basketball, stole away with a 56-53 overtime victory. The Deacs then settled in Memorial Coliseum for their first home appearances. Wake, which suffers few losses on its home court, smashed mid-west powers Purdue, 77-72, and Marquette, 95-62. Purdue coach Ray Eddy, after witnessing a dazzling rebounding exhibition by Watts, said the six-foot, six inch player was "the jumpiest white man I have ever seen."

Next stop for the Deacons was the Kentucky Invitational Tournament, held during the Christmas holidays. The Deacs thumped NCAA-bound Princeton, 86-67, in the first round. They could not contain Kentucky's fast break, however, and lost to the eventual SEC champions, 98-75, in the finals. Wake's team then traveled back to the Tarheel State to sink Navy, 77-69, in Greensboro. The Deacon five took advantage of their hottest half of the season (80 percent from the field) to ground the Midshipmen.

1963-64 SEASON

January came, and with it came the Deacs' usual mid-season slump. Of seven games Wake won but two, beating North Carolina, 80-71, and Virginia, 70-52, on the home court. The conquest over the Cavaliers marked Bones' 100th win at Wake Forest.

Then came February, and with it the Deacs' annual late-season burst. Wake whipped South Carolina at home, 92-79, and tripped Virginia Tech, 85-82, at the Coliseum. On the road, the quintet stole wins from Maryland, 79-77; from Virginia, 66-58 in overtime; from Clemson, 75-73; and from South Carolina, 76-59, in a game that almost resulted in a full-scale brawl between Wake Forest players and Tiger rooters.

Undoubtedly the greatest win in this stretch drive came over Duke, the nation's fourth-ranked team. Playing before 8,300 fans, the largest crowd in the history of the Coliseum, Wake stunned the Blue Devils, 72-71. It was "the greatest team effort since I've been at Wake Forest," commented a sweat-drenched McKinney after the battle. The Deacon victory was one of the country's biggest collegiate basketball upsets in 1964.

The Deacons rode into the ACC tournament with seven victories in their last eight games. In the first two rounds Wake had little trouble disposing of Virginia, 79-60 and Clemson, 86-64. But in the finals Duke's crushing fast break was in full gear and the Deacs, unable to get their offense properly functioning, succumbed, 80-59, before 12,400 spectators and a regional television audience.

Deacon Nine Again Draws Top Honors In ACC

Coach Stallings' chief worry in 1964 was finding enough uniforms to outfit all of the talented players who returned from last year's ACC championship. No less than eight of nine starters were back, headed by three All-Americans.

Last spring the Deacons won their second straight conference title posting an overall 28-11 record, and developed two important rivalries during the season. The first big foe was Georgia Southern, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics champion. Wake Forest managed to come out on top of a four-game series (3-1). Another rivalry, one that eventually stopped the Deacon bid for national honors, was that with Florida State. The Seminoles were thwarted on their visit to Winston-Salem by a score of 7-5, but in the NCAA regional tournament Wake bowed 12-4 in the double elimination. The Deacs then rallied for a 6-5 victory. In the all important final game Florida State triumphed 11-5, but Wake's showing netted a national ranking of eighth.

In the Conference, the Deacon nine shone brightly as they rolled to an 11-3 record. ACC foes were outscored 122-58 including such romps as 16-2 against Maryland, 14-5 over powerful Clemson, and 9-0 over South Carolina. Only Duke, North Carolina, and State were able to topple the Deacons and all three of these losses were heartily avenged.

The first North Carolina game, played at home before a large crowd, was one of the most triumphant of the season. The close rivalry between the two schools promised an equally close game, but the Deacons turned it into a 13-1 rout. Jerry Pardue pitched a neat six-hitter while his teammates scored ten runs in the seventh and eighth innings altogether nabbing 13 runs and 14 hits.

The team that took the field this year was virtually the same as 1963's with the addition of special honors that some team members accrued for last season's performances. Centerfielder Bill Scripture was named to first-team All American, leading the nation with 13 doubles, 13 home runs, and 54 runs batted in. His batting average registered .360. A second-team All American choice was catcher Wayne Martin, who finished right behind Scripture in the U. S. by smashing 12 home runs and 50 RBIs. He led the team in hitting with a .382 mark and set a ACC record with 58 hits. A third Deacon All American was second-baseman Dave Miller, who placed on the third-team for his .364 batting average and his fine .958 fielding average. Other returnees included left-fielder Mike Budd, shortstop Walt Noell, first-baseman Jim Israel, and Danny Loftin who shifted from right field to third base. The other starter was Don Metzger, taking over in left field.

The pitching staff was a Deacon strong point again in 1964. The top four hurlers including Louis Howard, Jerry Pardue, Frank Christie, and Bobby Biddix, were back from last year after posting a combined 23-7 record. This year's club found their schedule the most rugged in their history. Besides powerful rivals Georgia Southern and Florida State, perennial champions Connecticut and Lafayette appeared on the ledger. A fourteen-game conference slate rounded out the season for the 1964 Deacon nine.

ACC Champion Golfers Face Tough Season

Jay Siegel demonstrates the flawless form that won him All-American honors.

Wake Forest's defending Atlantic Coast Conference golf champions scheduled an ambitious program for 1964, including three stroke-play matches with Duke and North Carolina. Jesse Haddock, starting his fifth season as coach of the Deacons, had three out-of-state tournament appearances lined up for the team in addition to eight regular matches. The Deacs played in the Florida Invitational meet at Cape Coral, Florida, and in the Southern Intercollegiates at Athens, Georgia. A special westward jaunt took them to the 10th annual All-American Intercollegiate Invitational Tournament at Houston, Texas.

With seven performers returning from last year's squad, Haddock expected this season's team to be one of his best. His 1963 team won the ACC crown by six shots over runner-up Maryland; tied with Texas for sixth place in the NCAA; finished fifth in the Southern Collegiates; and copped third-place in the Florida Invitation.

Senior Ken Folkes and junior Jay Sigel headed the list of returnees. Other holdovers included Bobby Edgerton, Donnie Hedrick, Frank Merchant, Dennis Milne, Drew Pierson, and Jimmy Thompson. In the area of special honors, Sigel captured the ACC individual championship last spring while Folkes, who tied for the crown in 1962 finished in a tie for second place. Later Sigel finished only five strokes off the pace in the NCAA contest.

In the running for the most improved Deacon team of 1964 is the swimming squad. Winning five of twelve meets with only an eleven-man contingent, the tankmen erased nearly every previous Wake Forest record. Several of the losses were decided solely by the lack of Deacon depth, with the heartbreaking 49-46 defeat at the hands of Duke as a prime example.

The swimmers started the season with a sparkling 64-28 victory over Appalachian, capturing ten of the eleven events. Four close defeats to Virginia, Duke, Washington & Lee, and Virginia Military followed, but the team rallied to conquer William & Mary, 53-42. In subduing Clemson, 59-35, the Deacons showed their best form and again captured a first in ten of the eleven events. Other victories were later recorded over South Carolina and Emory.

The poolmen completed their season with a satisfying fifth place finish among fast company at the ACC Championships. Highlight of the three-day event was the diving, in which Wake Forest sophomore Drew Taylor upset All-American Ron Squires of Maryland to cop the first Deacon gold medal in seven years of competition. It marked Squires' initial ACC setback in his four-year career. Promising future strength, the frosh swimmers posted their best record in history by winning six out of seven meets.

Captain Sonny Poston smashed four Wake Forest free-style swimming records in 1964.

WF Harriers Rank Second in South

Wake's 1963 cross-country team raced the most successful season in the school's history. Sports Illustrated and Track and Field News, both national publications, rated the Deacons the No. 2 team in the South on the basis of a 7-1 dual-meet season against strong competition. Wake's lone loss was administered by North Carolina, the No. 1 team in the South. Most of the team's wins were by very small margins. The Deacs downed Davidson, 26-31; nipped South Carolina, 29-30, and smashed Furman, 25-31, and Clemson, 20-38, in a triangular meet. Virginia fell to the Deacs by a score of 24-38.

The high point of the season, however, was the victory over Duke, a feat never before accomplished by a Deacon cross-country squad. The gold-and-black edged the Blue Devils, 27-28 and ran over N. C. State, 22-35 in a triangular meet on the Wake Forest 4.25 mile course.

Three Deacons ran their best times all season in this race and placed in the top five finishers. Dave Turner came in second with a time of 22:34, Ron Taylor broke the tape right behind Turner in third place, and Ben Rush captured a fifth place.

Harrier Bill Via rounds a curve alone, putting forth an extra burst of speed to outdistance other runners.

Trackmen Continue To Improve Record

The Deacon trackmen beat out their second straight winning season in 1963, finishing with a 5-2 record. This year Coach Jordan's charges faced an even tougher eleven-meet schedule, although the indoor season indicated that the squad should have no trouble containing spring opponents.

Last season eight records fell as the Deacons grabbed a fifth place in the ACC. To start things rolling, Virginia was swamped, 104-41. During the spring recess a nine-man squad travelled to the Colonial Relays at William & Mary and brought back fifteen medals and a first place overall against fourteen other schools. The next two meets found Wake on the short end, but they soon hit their stride with an 85-60 win over N. C. State and a stunning 72-68 upset over V.P.I. In the latter meet the outcome was doubtful until the final event, when the WF mile relay team placed first. A final victory was recorded over Davidson, 92-46.

Heading this year's eighteen man squad were record-holding co-captains Dave Turner and Forrest Ernst. Several sophomores bolstered the field events, making this the most well-rounded track team in WF history.

Deacon pole vaulter Julian Ramirez clears 13 feet in a whopping victory over Virginia.

Rejuvenated Netmen Rack Up Wins in '64

Captain Curt Dixon sweeps a backhand over the net in an afternoon practice set.

Coach Jim Leighton, recent addition to the Wake Forest athletic staff, made great strides with the tennis team in 1964. Last year's 3-13 season left much room for improvement. With ranks reduced by illness, the Deacs were plagued with hard luck from the beginning. Even with these handicaps, however, victories were recorded over Kent State, High Point, and South Carolina.

In an attempt to revive Wake Forest tennis, lettermen Kurt Dixon, Lindsey Pratt, and Tom Williams returned to the courts with the advantage of experience. Other veterans included juniors Steve Parson, Rick Hill, Ross Griffith, Dick Hattaway, John Memory, and sophomore Bill Brown. Adding a rejuvenative spark to the entire team was Mike Alcalá, transfer student from Modesto Junior College in California, signed to Wake's first full tennis grant-in-aid.

With Pratt and Dixon making up one doubles team and Williams and Alcalá the other, the squad launched its 1964 season. Facing another sixteen-match schedule, the Deacs hosted five of their seven conference rivals on newly-refurbished courts. Coach Leighton's netmen also revitalized local tennis enthusiasm, often drawing large student turn-outs for the afternoon meets.

Increased Duties Keep Cheerleaders Hopping

Decked out with new uniforms, megaphones, and unique "pep ball," the Wake Forest cheerleaders found their role in leading campus spirit greatly expanded this year. Besides performing traditional duties of encouraging cheering and hushing loos at football and basketball games, the busy squad led pep rallies and instructed freshman prospects in the rudiments of the art.

The life of a cheerleader is not always cartwheels and sunshine, however, as squad members will readily attest. Side-splitting sidekick Ron Day, for example, underwent alarming halftime ordeals in his official capacity of "Demon Deacon." Tussles with ferocious Tigers and Blue Devils were only a few of the occupational hazards. In addition, the squad of ten toiled over such behind-the-scenes details as wrapping goalposts before the crowds arrived. And although dramatic entrances on a fire truck are awfully nice, no one denied that clanging into the VPI game during a downpour was a very dampening experience, indeed.

CHEERLEADERS—Front row: B. Lewis, A. Hunt, J. Browning, K. Chne, P. Bain. Back row: J. Monroe, B. White, M. Taylor, C. Corey, D. Smythe, R. Day (Deacon).

Intramurals Provide Year-Round Outlet

Intramural sports enlivened life this year, beginning with keener-than-ever football competition in the fall. The basketball season found no less than five fraternity and independent leagues vying for the campus championship with courts seldom free and scheduled games stretching into the night.

The KA's led the way in football, bowing only to the Lambda Chi's, 27-21. In track it was the same story; the KA's grabbed the overall trophy, but Theta Chi's Mike Lewis stole the show with victories in the 100, 220, and broad jump. Rick Hills of Sig Ep took the cross country event.

In the winter, the Sig Eps captured basketball for the second year in a row, outscoring the Delta Sigs by a score of 50-44 and then nipping the Superjocks for the championship. The Delta Sigs scored their seventh consecutive wrestling victory and then pulled a surprise by taking the swimming honors as well. The Pika's captured water polo by defeating the Sig Eps. In 1964, a closer race than usual found at least four fraternities in contention for the All-Campus Trophy.

On a somewhat smaller scale, women students interested in athletics formed teams within dorms and societies to compete in field hockey, softball, basketball, and volleyball. Occasional contests pitted coeds against revivals at Salem.

The Sig Ep's control of the backboard was an important factor in winning the championship game.

Tennis enthusiasts take advantage of sunny spring days for intramural matches.

CLASSES

With the increased classroom facilities of the new Humanities Building and the increased living-space of Babcock Dorm, Wake Forest enrollment reaches new heights in 1964. The student body takes on a more cosmopolitan tone as admissions officials glean applicants not only from distant states such as Texas and California, but also from the overseas nations of Switzerland, Sweden, and Germany. Requirements for admission stiffen with each succeeding year, and entering freshmen demonstrate the highest qualifications of any class yet to arrive on the Winston-Salem campus. Upperclassmen have the advantage of experience, however, when it comes to such dilemmas as exams, registration, and cafeteria lines. Expanding enrollment may threaten the small-college atmosphere of unity, but Deacon tradition prevails and passing greetings are still extended to friend and stranger alike.

Class of '64 Starts "Red Socks" Tradition

Moving into their final year as Wake Forest leaders, the Class of '64 left an indelible mark by sponsoring the sale of red socks on campus. In honor of Bones McKinney's famous tradition, Deacon fans made "the wearing of the red" a colorful institution during basketball season.

In the area of academics, seniors were for the first time required to undergo a battery of exams prior to graduation. Consisting of a comprehensive test in the morning and one covering the student's major in the afternoon, these senior exams evaluated the results of each Deacon's four-year college career.

Throughout the year, seniors looked to future plans ranging from industry to military service to graduate school. The Placement Office was a frequently-visited spot during the spring semester, as seniors prepared to "leave the fold" with a stronghold of experience and education to fall back on during the first years of their independence.

Juniors' Efforts Bring Budget "Out of the Red"

For many, the Fourth of July in Winston-Salem meant fireworks, summer school, and sweltering heat. To those in Wake's junior class, however, the holiday meant a big step toward freedom from the debt they have carried for two years, as class members sold cold drinks at the campus party. In the fall they braved a freezing drizzle at Bowman Gray Stadium, selling programs to raise money for a class gift. In summer times, these same workers donned bermudas and sweatshirts and set about scrubbing cars to add to their fund. A memorial to President Kennedy, a scholarship, and an air photograph of the campus came before the class for consideration. Another project for the Class of '65 was the co-sponsorship of a talent show during Greek Week to raise money for the United Fund. Before the year was out, juniors had actively participated in student government, athletics, debate, publications, and dramatics as they prepared for the leadership that they will assume next year.

Sophomores Foster Founding of W.F. Museum

With one year behind them, the sophomore class moved into another profitable term last fall. Selling chocolate bars in both boys' and girls' dormitories, washing cars in the "Boondocks" behind the Chapel, and selling programs at home athletic events were some of the means by which the Class of '66 padded their pockets. Providing inter-class communication was the sophomores' monthly newsletter, a carryover from their freshman year. In the area of new ideas, the Class Council began work on a project to establish a museum housing valuable objects from Wake Forest's history. Such articles as the shovel used by President Harry Truman to break ground for the Winston-Salem campus would be preserved for future generations of Deacons, along with a glass-enclosed scale model of the old Wake Forest campus and an up-to-date miniature of the present one.

Freshman Class Boasts Brainiest Members Yet

Arriving in mid-September with the highest I.Q.'s yet to grace a Wake Forest campus, the freshmen began the year with their first class elections. To avoid the imminent threat of bare coffers, the new officers appointed a Projects Committee which planned and executed the "Miss Baby Dea" contest, presenting the "cream of the freshman crop" to the Chapel crowd. Beauty was by no means the sole asset of the Class of '67, however. First-year students made their marks in the traditional religion, history, math, Eng- lish, and science courses, joining upperclassmen in such universal ordeals as exams and registration. In addition, frosh athletes made impressive contributions in football, basketball, baseball, swimming, track, and other areas of ACC competition in preparation for varisty participation next year. Aptitude, endurance and plain hard work made Potat, Kitchin, and Johnson Dorms active centers of student life this year.

Graduate Study Focuses on Individual

Graduate study at Wake Forest means far more than just another year of college. As he moves more deeply into his area of specialization, the individual soon discovers the solitude of his task. Departments are small, studies are exacting, and a graduate often enjoys the distinction of being the only participant in his particular project. Wake's growing number of Master Degree candidates, aided by more than $100,000 in scholarships, fellowships, and assistantships, often proctor undergraduate laboratories where they gain valuable experience while defraying the expenses of their higher education.

To physics students, the lab becomes home while pursuing the graduate degree.

Third Year Brings End in View

Safely over the hump, third-year law students enjoy the confidence of two years' experience and education in the workings of the legal world. All trials are not over, however, as aspiring lawyers prepare to meet the final test—the all-encompassing State Bar Examination. Many hours and efforts in daily preparation, extensive reading, research projects, and conscientious study have been directed toward this culminating exam and the subsequent admission into the North Carolina State Bar Association. With success, Law School graduates will move into positions of legal and social responsibility in communities throughout state and the nation.

Struggle for Survival Occupies Second Year

Moving into their second year, students in the Wake Forest School of Law find that the struggle for survival is as rigorous as ever. In true Darwinian fashion, only the "fittest" survive—so prospective lawyers take deep breaths and direct every effort toward achieving the vital "Pass" or perhaps the once-in-a-lifetime "High Pass." Midnight oil is consumed by the tankful, as second-year students pore over legal case studies in the pursuit of the principles and practices of their chosen profession.

Law School's Novices Tackle Rigorous Work

First-year students encounter many "growing pains" in their transformation from confident college seniors to bewildered novices in the School of Law. Once again in the modest beginner-stage, these students must adjust to the responsibilities of advanced course work and stiff intra-class competition. After the day's classes, instead of relaxing undergraduate-style with bull sessions and extracurriculars, the first-year law student heads home to face an evening of concentrated study in preparation for tomorrow.

Phi Alpha Delta

Officers, seated: W. White, Treasurer, J. Cagle, Justice, N. Casstevens, Vice-Justice. Standing: T. McNamara, Marshal, A. Bordeaux, Parliamentarian.

The Edgar A. Timberlake Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta inspired by winning the 1963 Scholarship Trophy, endeavored to make 1964 an even more successful year.

Speeches by gubernatorial hopefuls, well-known lawyers, and prominent faculty members enriched dinner meetings and furthered legal education. A newly paneled and redecorated library, with new books added, provided a more conducive atmosphere for study.

The chapter was well represented at the District Phi Alpha Delta Conclave held in March in Washington, D. C., at which Avery Bordeaux, third-year student from Delco, North Carolina, served as District Vice-Justice.

Highlighting the spring activities was the Spring Banquet honoring the newly initiated members and the graduating brothers. At year's end plans were made for a delegate to attend the National Phi Alpha Delta Convention to be held in New York City during the World's Fair.

Mrs. Anne Redden

Mrs. Ginger King

Phi Delta Phi international legal fraternity was founded at the University of Michigan in 1869 and is the oldest professional fraternity in America. The Ruffin Inn chapter of Wake Forest was chartered in 1947.

For almost a century Phi Delta Phi's have prepared law students to meet the need for high scholarship and rigid adherence to a code of professional ethics. In the process, many members have attained prominence in American affairs, including Franklin D. Roosevelt, John Foster Dulles, and Adlai Stevenson.

In preparation for their entrance into the legal profession, the brothers participated in such activities as dinner meetings, smokers, and guest-speaker programs.

A successful year was climaxed with the joint initiation ceremony before the North Carolina Supreme Court, a banquet, and the annual dance. These activities were held in Raleigh with the Carolina and Duke chapters.

The HOWLER, 1964 was printed by the letterpress process by Edwards & Broughton Company, Raleigh, North Carolina. All engravings for the book were produced in Chicago by Jahn & Ollier Engraving Company. The paper is 100 lb. double-coated enamel. The face for body copy, captions, and page numbers is Janson. All display heads are Bodoni.

This is the sixty-first edition of the Howler and contains 296 pages.

Editor's Notes

Tonight as we wrap up the last of the 1964 Howler, it is difficult to feel the sense of climax we've been looking forward to all year. A typewriter is still clacking out the final pieces of copy, and the last few layouts are being recopied to make things conform to a last-minute check. The office sounds are the same, but there is a deadline tension or excitement keeping everyone going just a little later than usual.

It's been quite a year for the Howler. It all started in Chicago with a two-day planning session between Ralph Van Dyke, Tommy, and myself, and tomorrow it will end in Raleigh when we turn everything over to Joe Phelps at Edwards & Broughton. Between Chicago and Raleigh, though, there has been a steady stream of events. Our trips to Wilmington, N. C. for the Baptist Convention and to old Wake Forest were not only productive but entertaining. Then, as usual, at Christmas we were locked in with our razor blades in hand to prepare the class section for Jahn and Ollier. However, we did manage to break for the Pub Row Christmas banquet, when we squeezed everyone into our office for a Slater-catered dinner, Charlie Winberry playing Santa provided the fun as he distributed gag gifts ranging from a fish bowl and a turtle to red underwear and notebook-type wedding rings.

After Christmas we took pictures and more pictures, and the book began to take shape. All-night sessions on the floor in my room with Mary Beth resulted in finished pictures, and daily sessions with Donia ended stacks of completed copy. Finally, we got to the panic point, and everyone pitched in full force from our brothers and cousins to the business staff. I wouldn't know how to thank everyone for their help this year; I can only hope that they'll be rewarded by the result of their efforts. Commendations go to Molly Flanders at J.&O., to Grigg Studios, and to the Dean's Office, and especially to Ron, Richard, and Barbara for being so understanding about those lost weekends.

The typewriters are quiet now, and most of the people have gone. The finished book has been slowly piled on my desk since I started writing this. The sun is coming up over the gym, so it's time to sleep an hour before we leave for Raleigh.

Kitty Bernhardt

P.S.—On behalf of the entire school, we'd like to congratulate Ric Wilson for the All-American honors he received on the 1963 Howler.

do you know...

that you are graduating into one of the most promising areas of the nation? A recent urban research study forecasts "a linear city" for the 300 miles stretching through the industrial Carolinas. Here, in the 20,000 square miles served by Duke Power, scores of thriving towns connect busy cities. Research centers, colleges and universities, and hundreds of industries thrive.

Here in the Carolinas Crescent, there is real challenge and opportunity. There is a place for you to fill, a job for you to do, in an exciting future that begins—right now.

FREEDOM TO LEARN

Certainly one of the most precious privileges we enjoy in this free society is the right to learn . . . to choose the institution that best fits our needs and desires, and the subjects that interest us most.

To ask questions, and seek answers.

To read, study, and probe for the great truths.

And like most privileges, this one carries a responsibility . . . the responsibility to use it wisely.

P. H. Hanes Knitting Company congratulates you, the young men and women who are devoting important years of your lives to learning.

We know your lives will be richer for it, and your service to mankind more complete.

May each of you enjoy the heights of success in your chosen career.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

The Wake Forest College Book Store takes this opportunity to thank you for your patronage and to extend our congratulations to the 1964 graduates and our best wishes for a happy and prosperous future. After you leave the campus we hope you will return often to see us. We will be happy to serve you by mail. Please, when writing us, give us the year in which you graduated.

"Jahn & Ollier Again"

A familiar and reassuring slogan

FAMILIAR . because it has appeared in thousands of the country's finest yearbooks for the past half century.

REASSURING . because thirty years of specialized experience bring complete service, outstanding quality and dependable delivery to the yearbook staffs with whom we work.
